Hen-Pecked Gene Accepts Token Egg

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Eugene Whelan, federal minister of agriculture appeared stuck for words only briefly when he was approached by a man dressed as a hen Tuesday night.

The man—dressed in white with a red headdress to resemble a hen—ran through the aisles at Cleary Auditorium to hand Whelan a covered tray.

The minister, having just begun speaking to 600 delegates at the annual convention of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario, watched the man prance before the audience and utter a few cackles before presenting the tray.

Whelan took off the cover and found an egg taped to the silver tray. The presentation was an apparent reminder of the millions of surplus eggs the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency will have destroyed by the end of this year.

Whelan looked at the tray, and then said:

"If you don't keep that egg properly refrigerated it's going to go rotten."

U.S. Oil Blueprint Black

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Federal Energy Administration believes the U.S. can never again be free of foreign oil because no good substitutes for oil are anywhere near.

Basically, the FEA has concluded that coal cannot substitute for oil because it is too difficult to mine and burn. It believes that atomic power is only a substitute for coal, not oil. It also believes that synthetic fuels, solar energy and geothermal power provide no near-term relief from the chronic U.S. oil deficit because they are at least 10 years away from making even the smallest impact on energy use.

The lack of an oil substitute, the FEA suggests, means the U.S. must continue to import oil because the nation does not have enough oil of its own to fuel the economy for any length of time.

Even the oil produced by all-out drilling in the Atlantic Ocean, the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Alaska would free the U.S. from imports for only a few years time, the agency said.

These are the overriding conclusions reached by the FEA in a report labelled Blueprint for Project Independence.

Barrie Clark Ducks Rent Ceiling Issue

Special to The Times

B.C.'s rentalsman has refused to recommend a new rent hike ceiling for the province's 300,000 tenants and instead has handed the controversial problem to Attorney-General Alex Macddnald.

In a Vancouver press conference today Barry Clark admitted he has "ducked the question" by making recommendations to Macdonald on the current eight per cent maximum allowable rent increase without actually suggesting a new figure for the ceiling.

Clark told reporters it would be a conflict of interest for him to recommend a rent ceiling and at the same time try to act as an impartial judge and problem-solver in landlord-tenant disputes.

Instead, Clark has recommended that Macdonald set up a separate commission to decide how big a rent hike landlords should be permitted — a recommendation he claimed Macdonald will implement in the legislature session which will open Nov. 1.

Clark said his own information indicated the eight per cent level was "too low" but he refused to say what the level would be.

Clark hinted he opted for the commission scheme after a report by University of B.C. economist Dr. John Cragg indicated a rent ceiling figure far higher than the eight per cent figure.

"I told the attorney-general if I were required to recommend on the rent increase I would have to go with the Cragg report, and he indicated he would go along with my recommendation on a commission," Clark said.

Clark said the Cragg formula, which he earlier called "shocklingly high" took into account skyrocketing costs which the eight per cent freeze failed to account for.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said in Victoria following Clark's announcement he is aware of the problems facing the rentalsman's office and that he will discuss the problems with Cabinet.

He said he wished to assure tenants that if the rentalsman cannot handle rent increase reviews and complaints, somebody will carry on the function.

He agreed that in time the policy end of the rentalsman's responsibilities may move closer to the housing department and the complaint side could operate separately.

"We have no intention of abandoning tenants who need rental review," he said.

The attorney-general said Clark has been doing a "marvellous job" and he has full confidence in him.

Clarke also partially agreed with landlords who have claimed that the eight per cent freeze has created a housing shortage by discouraging people from building rental accommodation.

"I don't think the cessation of home construction was caused by the eight per cent freeze because the situation is the same in Ontario and Quebec where there is no freeze," Clarke said.

"But I do think that if there has been a time in the past 12 months when this cessation would have been turned around, then the eight per cent freeze is in all probability responsible for a failure to start up."

Landlord groups acted quickly, blasting Clarke for "passing the buck" on the controversial question.

Realty Probe Set

A B.C. government inquiry into the real estate industry will be launched next year, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald announced Tuesday.

University of B.C. economist Gideon Rosenbluth, 53, has been assigned the task which will include investigation of the industry's code of ethics, abuse of realtors' licences and a fairness of sales commissions in an escalating market.

Macdonald described the survey as a "leisurely look" into the industry which will take six to eight months. Rosenbluth will act as a special consultant to Macdonald and will not hold formal hearings such as royal commissions usually hold.

Speculation by salesmen will be studied but Macdonald said the inquiry will also look into the possibility of establishing some minimum wage guarantee for sale representatives.

While escalating real estate prices also mean increasing commissions, Macdonald said the lowest 25 per cent of salesmen receive an average monthly salary of only $249.

"That may be okay for part-timers or people who come into and then leave the industry, but it's below minimum wage," he said.

Part of the problem may be too many salesmen, he added.

Salesmen are not the only people involved in speculation, said Macdonald, and he said he wondered whether B.C. should follow Ontario's lead with a tax on land speculation profits.

Rosenbluth's appointment was announced at a meeting of the salesmen's division of Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board and it met with applause from the audience.

The crowd was not so pleased, however, with the suggestion of a minimum pay guarantee for salesmen and one man shouted from the group that salesmen are free-wheeling people who want to remain on commission.

NEWS BRIEFS

New Bomb Letter

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Authorities have received a second letter from an extortionist who claims to have blown up 11 high voltage transmission lines in the Oregon countryside and threatens more explosions unless he is paid $1 million. FBI agents would not elaborate on contents of the letter.

Heroin Haul

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP and customs officers have seized eight pounds of heroin worth at least $4.6 million. The drug was allegedly packaged in a box and mailed here from somewhere in southeast Asia. Yuen Yuk Lam, 53, of nationalist China, was charged with possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Repeating Shots

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A gunman shot seven people in a bar — six of them apparently because the gun would not stop firing.

None of the victims was severely hurt. Police said the man walked into the bar, knocked a man down and shot him. The gunman also fell and the gun kept on firing, hitting six other people. The gunman escaped.

Solomons Quake

HONOLULU (AP) — A major earthquake struck a remote area of the South Pacific, authorities said today. There were no early reports of casualties or damages. The quake, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale, was recorded in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands.

Knives Found

BOSTON (UPI) — Hundreds of students at two racially troubled Boston schools filed through metal detectors on loan from two airlines Tuesday in attempts to keep weapons out of the schools. Police found eight knives discarded on the school lawns.

Increase in Pay Hinted for MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases for MPs may be in the offing, Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp announced in the Commons Tuesday.

Replying to Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who complained that members face soaring living costs like everyone else, Sharp said he hoped to "persuade the government to bring forward some proposals about members' salaries."

Members last received increases in 1971, when pay went to $18,000 from $12,000 a year.

In addition, MPs receive a tax-free expenses allowance of $8,000 to $9,650 a year, depending on constituency.

A salary increase based on inflation would give MPs an increase to at least $23,040 — their present $18,000 plus a 28-per cent raise of $5,040.

One parliamentary official has estimated that the average MP works about 60 hours a week "and you can add an automatic 20 hours to that for ministers." Most organized workers now work between 32 and 38 hours a week with provisions for overtime.

The extra work that goes with a cabinet post is worth more money—a $15,000 salary plus unlimited expenses on top of the basic $18,000. Cabinet ministers also have a $2,000 car allowance.

Oil Firms Profits Soar

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The biggest U.S. oil companies began reporting third-quarter earnings Tuesday, with profits increased to one and a half times over those reported a year ago.

Exxon Corp., the largest, said earnings rose 25.4 per cent over the third quarter of 1973, while Shell Oil's were ahead 158 per cent, Standard Oil of Indiana's earnings doubled and Gulf Oil Corp.'s were up 31 per cent.

In Canada, Imperial Oil Ltd. reported earnings for the first nine months ended Sept. 30 were $252 million or $1.93 a share compared with $154 million or $1.18 a share during the corresponding period in 1973.

The company said in a release the increased earnings were due to higher prices for crude oil, natural gas and petroleum products, and a stronger market and improved prices for chemicals.

Earnings by Gulf and Exxon in the U.S. had risen dramatically in the 1973 period over the 1972 quarter.

Greek Junta to Exile For New Conspiracy

Times News Services

ATHENS — Former dictator George Papadopoulos and four of his closest associates in the ousted military junta were arrested and exiled to a tiny island in the Aegean Sea today for conspiring against Greece's three-month-old civilian regime.

Former military police chief Brig. Dimitrios Ioannides, included among those to be deported, escaped arrest and was being sought by police.

A government announcement said those arrested with Papadopoulos were his former deputy premiers, Stylianos Patakos and Nicholas Makarezos; one of the hard-line ministers in his regime, Ioannis Ladas; and the former chief of the central intelligence agency, Michael Roufogalis.

The government announced Tuesday that Papadopoulos has been under house arrest for the last three weeks "for making conspiratorial moves." There have been persistent reports that leaders of the ousted military regime were plotting to make a comeback.

The jailed men, all former army officers, were the chief conspirators in the colonels' coup in April, 1967, that ended parliamentary democracy in Greece. They ran Greece until a junta of generals overthrew Papadopoulos last November in the wake of violent student demonstrations.

The reform government which replaced the dictatorship in July announced Monday that Papadopoulos, Roufogalis and three other leading members of the military dictatorship have been charged with responsibility for the "premeditated multiple murder" of at least 18 persons during the student uprising last November.

The maximum penalty on that charge is death.

TRUDEAU IN BELGIUM

BRUSSELS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau arrived here from Paris today on the last leg of a European visit aimed at strengthening Canada's economic ties with the European Common Market.

Trudeau, accompanied by his wife and Canadian government officials, was greeted at the airport by his Belgain counterpart, Leo Tindemans.

Trudeau's motorcade left the airport immediately for Stuyvenberg Castle on the outskirts of Brussels where the Canadian prime minister will be the guest of the Belgian government.

Trudeau was to drive later in the day to Tindemans' residence to hold political talks.

The first day of the visit will end with a gala dinner hosted by the Belgian government at Egmont Palace.

He will confer Thursday with NATO and Common Market officials.

He heads for home Friday after a morning news conference and a luncheon.

'Save Highlands' Campaign Gains Momentum

The "Save the Highlands" campaign was turned on full force at a public meeting Tuesday night and picked up support from other community groups and some municipal officials.

Wearing paper flowers proclaiming the campaign slogan, members of the Highlands District Association pleaded with the Capital Region Board to save the "island of serenity" in the midst of Greater Victoria.

The public hearings, called to find out what Greater Victoria residents think of the regional development plan, drew crowds of about 80 in the afternoon and another 150 in the evening. Some 20 briefs were presented during the two sessions.

Objections to the plan were numerous and pleas for amendments to the plan ranged from scrapping the whole thing to moving a warehousing zone out of one small area.

At both afternoon and evening meetings, board chairman Jim Campbell tried to reassure groups and individuals that the regional plan will not be an inflexible, unalterable framework of planning policies.

"I know some people think it's a concrete, stainless steel blueprint that will be stamped on this area and its residents for all time, but it's not," he told one speaker.

And, dealing specifically with the concerns of Highlands residents, Campbell stressed that the CRD has not arrived at any estimated population totals for residential development in that area.

When one resident pointed out that a newspaper report put the ultimate figure as high as 35,000 people, Campbell shrugged and said: "We're also in the difficult position of having everyone concerned about this using the figure that happens to suit their purposes best."

Highlands Association president Frank Spellacy told the board the Highlands, which under the plan is slated for heavy urban development by the year 2,001, should be preserved as a recreational area for Greater Victoria.

He suggested that the zoning designation of "potential urban" for the Highlands be changed to "upland" which would cut off dense development.

The Highlands cause also received support from Derek Mallard of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment; from Bruce Hardy of the Victoria Sierra Club; from Oak Bay Ald. and regional director John Goult, who said alternatives must be studied; from Saanich Ald. and director Sandy Noel who said costs of servicing the Highlands must be looked at and from Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner who said he was impressed by the presentation.

Campbell said population in the Highlands will depend on detailed studies of sewage, transportation and other related problems.

Such studies would determine the population density which that area could absorb in the long-term, but "we are not able to say what that will be at this stage of the game."

Saanich, represented by Mayor Ed Lum, filed a statement objecting to several proposals in the regional plan, and stressed that the plan itself will not be "acceptable" to that municipality unless its suggested amendments are adopted.

In particular, Lum said, Saanich opposes the concept that each municipality should supplement the regional plan's goals and objectives by preparing its own official community plan.

The Saanich feeling is that this technique will deprive municipalities of some of their present automony, he said, because the community plans once adopted and registered can only be changed with cabinet approval.

The method will also prove "unwieldy" as it will "remove the very flexibility which could be required to respond to emerging crisis situations, such as housing, transportation, supply and agricultural production."

Lum said to suggest that the regional plan will not be implemented without such

Highland Supporters Out in Full Force

"rigid" measures is to "impugn the integrity of all member districts and areas" which want a regional plan.

Saanich suggested that community plans should still be required, but that the "official" tag be dropped.

Its brief also dismissed as "unrealistic" the plan's attempt to establish arbitrary population totals for various parts of the regional district up to 1996.

Saanich would find such a system unworkable, Lum said, because "we must immediately plan a program of servicing in order to ensure the continued development of the district.

"The timing and sizing of this servicing must allow for flexibility of area development, and the lifetime and potential use of these services extends well beyond the 22-year horizon and population predictions of the official regional plan.

Saanich also emphatically rejected the regional plan's attempt to impose "arbitrary or meaningless limitations" on floor areas or acreage figures with regard to commercial, industrial or institutional land uses.

As examples of the difficulties such limitations would impose of Saanich, it cited the proposed Broadmead regional shopping centre and the major warehouse park planned for the Royal Oak area.

Broadmead, as the only shopping centre of regional size, would need 417,000 or 450,000 square feet to become "economically viable," Lum noted, yet the plan sought to limit such centres to 400,000 square feet.

Similarly, the plan would limit the wholesale-retail distribution area to 48 acres, whereas Saanich planners recommend that a warehouse park of 100 to 120 acres "would provide not only a better economy of servicing but a more acceptable buffered and landscaped area for the protection of adjacent residential neighborhoods."

Another common cause running throughout the six-and-a-half hours of public hearings was objection to any sewage outfall in the Albert Head-Metchosin area.

Elgin Neish, a Victoria commercial fisherman, urged the regional board to demand that the provincial government use a closed-cycle treatment plant, instead of a sewage outfall into the ocean, if a major part of the population is shifted to the Highlands.

"Once the ocean is dead, who the hell if going to pump it out?" Neish asked.

Rients Van Goudoever of East Sooke, took the regional board to task for its "septic tank mentality" and said alternative methods of sewage disposal should be studied.

The Albert Head Ratepayers' Association also opposed a sewage outfall system and supported the Highlands residents "who wish to preserve their identity and quality of life." B.A.C.M. Development Corporation Ltd., a company owning more than 1,200 acres of land located mainly in Central Saanich, adjoining Brentwood and Tod Inlet, objected to the regional plan's designation of those lands as upland and major park areas.

The company's senior vice-president and general manager, N. F. Bothwell, noted that the term "upland areas" as used in the regional plan is intended, in the planners' words, "to discourage residential use of land which is generally unsuitable for development because of steepness, rocky terrain or remoteness from urban services."

Such factors, he contended, do not apply to the company's lands. And in the case of company property designated as major park areas, including waterfront land on Tod Inlet, Bothwell said his firm questions "the desirability of such broad public access to such a small inlet."

This would lead to demands for intensive public use of the inlet for a wide range of activities, he said, and inevitably would harm the quality of the inlet's environment.

"Tod Inlet clearly has recreational potential which B.A.C.M., as the owner of adjoining lands, would seek, through development, to render accessible to local residents at a level of activity that would not be detrimental," Bothwell said. The statement drew some skeptical exclamations from the public gallery.

Bill Craig, a director of the Victoria Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, formerly Victoria Homebuilders, suggested that local community plans, which must conform to the regional plan, be taken out of provincial government jurisdiction and be put under the control of the regional board. Local community plans must now be approved by the provincial government before they can be implemented.

Craig suggested that the local community plans be made in the form of by-laws that would be part of the regional plan.

He also urged that the plan be open to review at all times, instead of every five years as suggested in the regional plan.

All amendments to the regional plan suggested by those at the public hearing will be considered by the board before third reading is given to the plan.

The board will start its debate at a regular meeting later today. It is expected the board will take at least two meetings to discuss amendments.

Birth Rate Down

OTTAWA (CP) — The national birth rate was the lowest on record last year and the birth rate dropped in all provinces except Quebec, Statistics Canada reports.

The national rate was 15.5 per 1,000 population compared with 15.9 the previous year. Records were begun in 1921.

Quebec again had the lowest rate among the provinces at 13.8 per 1,000 population but its birth rate was unchanged while rates in all other provinces and the territories declined.

Newfoundland again had the highest rate and Prince Edward Island was the only province disrupting the ranking of the previous year, moving to fifth from eighth.

Here are the rates by province, beginning with the lowest, for 1973 compared with 1972: Quebec, 13.8 both years; British Columbia, 14.8 and 15.4; Onatrio, 15.6 and 16.0; Saskatchewan, 16.3 and 16.9; P.E.I., 16.4 and 17.8; Nova Scotia, 16.5 and 17.0; Manitoba, 16.0 and 17.7; Alberta, 17.4 and 17.7; New Brunswick, 17.5 and 18.4; and Newfoundland, 22.0 and 24.4.

Bomb Goes Off As Heath Dines

LONDON (AP) — The second bomb explosion in two weeks in London's fashionable St. James district hit a private club as Conservative Leader Edward Heath was having dinner across the street.

Scotland Yard said three wine stewards were injured, one seriously, when the bomb went off Tuesday night in a small dining room of the exclusive Brooks Club.

Schoolgirl Killed

A Mill Bay schoolgirl struck by a car near her home Tuesday died before reaching medical aid at Cowichan Valley District Hospital in Duncan.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said seven-year-old Charmon Garbett apparently ran into the path of a car driven by Charles Pickering of Nanaimo on Trans-Canada Highway about 3:35 p.m.

The girl had stepped from a school bus, but the bus had moved a considerable distance up the highway when she started across the pavement, police said. There appeared to be no obstruction to impair vision of either child or driver.

No charges are contemplated, police said.

The girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Garbett, of Mill Bay.

Gilmour Back As Mediator

Clark Gilmour has been appointed mediator in contract negotiations between Greater Victoria school board and its maintenance workers.

Talks between the board and Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees have begun toward a two-year contract which starts Jan. 1.

Both sides expressed satisfaction with the appointment of Gilmour, whose mediation two years ago helped settle a three-week strike by Local 382.

PENDER I. MAN WINS $25,000

A retired barber from Pender Island is one of two British Columbians among eight finalists in the first Western Canada Lottery.

Frank Gelmetti, 61, will win a minimum of $25,000 and could win the top prize of $250,000.

The only other B.C. finalist is Graeme Marshall of New Hazelton.

"I thought at first it was a joke," said Gelmatti, who was informed of his good fortune today by an early morning phone call from Winnipeg.

He held only one ticket on the lottery, but has been buying Irish Sweepstakes tickets for nearly 40 years.

"I never gave up hope," he said. "I always thought, somebody's got to win it."

Gelmetti and the seven other finalists will be invited to the final draw in Winnipeg Nov. 2.

Top prize is $250,000, second ticket holder gets $100,000, third gets $50,000 and the remianing five get $25,000 each.

Gelmetti said he will invest most of the money, but will use some for travelling.

Some 1,900 names also were drawn today for consolation prizes of $100 each in the lottery, jointly operated by the governments of the four western provinces.

The eight finalists:

Dean Admits Using $4,850 From Fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House counsel John Dean testified at the Watergate cover-up trial today that in 1972 and 1973 he made personal use of $4,850 withdrawn from a $350,000 secret White House fund.

The admission was drawn out in cross-examination by defence lawyer John Wilson in an apparent effort to discredit Dean's character before the eyes of the jury.

In two days of cross-examination, Wilson has yet to attack the substance of Dean's narration of how he participated for nine months in covering up the Watergate scandals.

Defence lawyers acknowledge privately that six White House tapes heard by the jury so far make it difficult to dent the testimony given by Dean during five days on the witness stand under prosecution questioning.

Dean testified in detail before the Senate Watergate committee about his personal use of money from the White House fund. Its significance in the trial is how it affects the jury's opinion of his character and honesty.

Under cross-examination today, Dean testified that $15,200 in cash was delivered to his office by White House aide Gordon Strachan.

Dean said that on Oct. 12, 1972, the eve of his honeymoon, he took out $4,850, part of which was spent on the trip and part of which was used for miscellaneous expenditures over the next six months.

Wilson, repeatedly questioned Dean about the propriety of using the funds without advising anyone at the White House.

"For a period of six months you used money that didn't belong to you, didn't you?" Wilson asked.

Dean: "Yes, sir."

The former White House counsel acknowledged that although he placed a $4,850 cheque written to cash in his office safe with the balance of the funds, there was not an adequate balance in his bank checking account to cover that amount.

Dean said, however, that he had other personal funds, including a stock brokerage account totalling $80,000 at one point, which he was prepared to use to account for the $4,850.

Dean said that in April, 1973, he informed his lawyer about the $4,850 and the more than $10,000 remaining in the cash originally placed in his White House safe.

Dean said the total $15,200 is now held in a non-interest-bearing account in a bank in suburban Rockville, Md.

In Tuesday's testimony, Dean admitted that he tried to conceal his own destruction of evidence in the Watergate scandal right after urging Nixon to put an end to the cover-up.

Dean said he destroyed documents from Watergate burglar Howard Hunt's safe during the original Watergate trial and then disclaimed any knowledge of them in notes he jotted down two months later when the cover-up was starting to crumble.

Dean said he was trying to keep the White House-sponsored "Ellsberg burglary" from coming to light in January, 1973, when he found two notebooks and a pop-up address book that Hunt had kept in his safe at the Executive Office Building. Dean shredded the notebooks and put the address book in a White House "burn bag."

"I didn't give it much thought at the time," Dean said in his first public explanation of the incident. "I was just destroying something I didn't know how to handle. I just threw it in the shredder and hoped the problem would go away."

the weather

Mainly cloudy skies prevail over the north coast and the central interior of B.C. this morning with some precipitation reported associated with a weather system moving across the province. Over southern B.C. mainly clear skies are reported except for some localities particularly on northern Vancouver Island where skies are overcast and locally some rain is occurring. An improving trend is forecast as this weather system weakens on passage eastwards to Alberta by tonight. Another system from the Pacific will bring more weather to the north coast tonight and Thursday. Generally sunny conditions are forecast for the remainder of the regions on Thursday.

Layoffs Jump 16% In Forest Industry

Layoffs in the B.C. forest industry jumped 16 per cent in the last two weeks, the Council of Forest Industries said Tuesday.

An estimated 13,500 men are now unemployed, including an additional 900-1,000 on Vancouver Island since figures were compiled Oct. 7.

CFI president Gordon Draeseke said the provincial government has the power to moderate the situation, even though the direct cause of layoffs is a world slump in lumber markets and a depressed North American construction industry.

The area chiefly affected by the latest layoffs is the Cariboo, where lumber manufacturing is directed primarily to the eastern Canadian and U.S. railway lumber market.

Outlook for improvement is uncertain.

"In the last two weeks there has been no development that makes things any rosier," said a CFI spokesman.

Among those recently laid off are 305 from Sooke Forest Products—mostly from Goodridge mill; 217 from Victoria Plywood; 167 from B.C. Forest Products; 90 from Tahsis Co.; and 88 from Mayo Lumber. Others, included in province-wide figures, have been released by MacMillan Bloedel and Crown Zellerbach.

Draeseke said industry representatives will ask Premier David Barrett and Resources Minister Bob Williams Nov. 4 to reconsider proposals made in August to revise the stumpage tax system, cut stumpage rates meanwhile, impose a moratorium on waste billing (a penalty for wood left on logging sites), and speedier approval for harvesting permits and more flexible logging guidelines.

The industry wants "common justice" enabling it to maintain a cash flow of reasonable proportions that will moderate unemployment, Draeseke said.

Otherwise, he saw no sign of improvement and can detect no change in the lumber market slump.

CLEANUP PROBLEMS face more than 1,500 homes in the Sydney, N.S., area following Sunday's storm damage. Some areas of Prince Edward Island are still without power from the storm, and are not expected to have power restored until this weekend. In Sydney, 400 of the 600 electrical poles knocked out have been replaced as crews from Montreal and New Brunswick moved in to help with the cleanup.

TRAFFIC JAM FOILS THEFT

ROME (UPI) — Rome's rush hour traffic chaos foiled a $100,000 bank robbery Tuesday, police said.

They said armed, masked men successfully held up a downtown bank, but were forced to leave the $107,200 loot in their automobile and flee on foot when they got hopelessly snarled in a lunch hour traffic jam.

Police gave chase and arrested two suspects.

VANCOUVER AIR WORSE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Air pollution levels here appeared on the rise, as Tuesday afternoon readings of carbon monoxide surpassed the federal standards.

The levels represent a steady increase toward highs recorded last week, when carbon monoxide content exceeded the standard of 13 parts per million by five points.

A weekend rain and a mild system which moved through the Lower Mainland erased the high readings and Sunday they fluctuated between two and four parts per million.

By Monday, however, a high of 13.1 parts per million was recorded, and Tuesday it rose to 13.9 parts.

"They are the worst readings we have ever had," Don Johannes, of the Pollution Control Board said Tuesday. "If we have a couple of more weeks of no rain or wind it could get really bad."

The weather office predicted Tuesday that a small system approaching Vancouver from the north will have little effect on releasing the stable air locking in the pollution by the time it reaches the Lower Mainland.

Environmental spokesmen also blamed the automobile and Vancouver's unchecked growth for the current pollution delemma.

Turning the Taxation Screw

Resource taxation has always been a delicate issue for Canadian governments. Depletion allowances and exploration incentives in the past made the country a haven for foreign companies exploiting Canadian resources. When the 1961 Carter tax commission and Walter Gordon surfaced, the howl from business in general shook Parliament. Succeeding white papers watered down the original proposals to the point where some resource companies paid little, if any federal tax.

Provincial governments abhor a federal tax vacuum. Where the federal government was content to fiddle, provincial regimes, aided and abetted by nascent Canadian nationalism, stepped in adding their own provincial levies. From a position of slight taxation, the resource companies were suddenly catapulted into a new era of severe taxation. In Saskatchewan, for example, oil companies complain that federal and provincial taxes add up to 107 per cent. Put another way, the companies are losing 11 cents on each barrel of oil produced. The Saskatchewan government does not agree with the oil companies' assessment, naturally. In the mess that has resulted, the federal government is attempting to come up with a compromise that will ensure future development and exploration as well as allow everybody a piece of the action.

It is no easy task, as Finance Minister John Turner learned on his recent visit to the four western capitals. His purpose in plumbing provincial premiers is to persuade them to soften resource taxation stands. He is batting about .500. Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed and Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer indicated they would be prepared to negotiate petroleum royalty structures. But Saskatchewan, and especially British Columbia were adamant. No concessions were given and nothing was promised.

What worries resource companies is not only the new provincial levies, but a proposal under the defeated May 6 federal budget that provincial royalties would no longer be tax deductible at the federal level. That bombshell has caused anxiety in many boardrooms across the country. Will Turner have the same proposal in the new budget, scheduled to be tabled in the house of commons next month? If the clause remains oil and mining companies say they can no longer afford to do business in some provinces. Of course the jockeying and lobbying preceding any federal budget is intense. And the fact that Turner is lobbying provincial premiers to soften their stands, suggests the federal government will not modify its own approach to any great extent. Budget night will tell the tale.

Much of the current ambiguity in resource taxation policies is because the federal government dragged its feet and procrastinated, at a time when Canadian resource companies were being taken over faster than western gushers were coming in. It is too late to cry over Walter Gordon, the Carter tax commission and vacillating governments. At the same time Premier Barrett should not slam the door in Ottawa's face. He is correct that resource industries were undertaxed in the past. Being right, however, doesn't give the premier the right to be righteous. Ottawa is trying. If the provincial government won't even negotiate on non-renewable resource royalties, all those miners and oilmen may pick up their tools and disappear into more hospitable climes after the federal budget.

". . . here's to us . . . not one of us elected to office . . . !"

Crime and the Jobless

The unemployment insurance commission seems to draw criticism like a lightning rod. Any federal agency responsible for spending $2 billion a year should be closely watched, but the UIC does get blamed for an awful lot of things, from a scarcity of farm labor to a rapid turnover in some undesirable jobs.

Mayor Art Phillips of Vancouver topped the list this week with a statement linking unemployment insurance with the proliferation of crime in his city. He said police noted a disproportionate number of individuals they arrest were young unemployed, implying a cause and effect relation.

Probably a large number of youths in trouble with the police have brown hair and blue eyes too — it's almost as absurd to blame unemployment insurance for the problem. It may or may not be true that unemployment breeds crime — by this line of reasoning, the Depression must have been Canada's most lawless era — but the mayor could better use his re-election campaign than in hunting up scapegoats for Vancouver's rising crime rate.

DEREK HILL

Ottawa Owes Us $362 Million

QUEBEC — "How can Ottawa expect Quebeckers to support the merits of federalism when the present system is discriminatory in providing unequal treatment to different parts of the country?"

No, the speaker was not Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque. This castigating rebuke of existing federalism flowed instead from the lips of Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette, the man who vigorously fought the "nation-breaking" tactics of FLQ terrorists in 1970 through massive arrests among known separatist spokesmen.

Choquette's remark was made at a press conference just after federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand had again slammed the door on Quebec's request for financial compensation to help cover the burden of supporting a provincial police force instead of using the federally-sponsored Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

First of all it should be pointed out that Choquette is not about to cross the floor of the National Assembly to join the anti-federalist Parti Quebecois.

Old Problem

The minister's verbal assault on Ottawa, and Allmand in particular, is purely a publicity gimmick designed to attract public support for a cause he sincerely believes in.

Legally, Quebec is not justified in its claim but Choquette is determined to use the "endangered federalism" approach for all it is worth in forcing Ottawa to surrender.

The history of the problem dates back to 1867 when the fathers of Confederation gave provinces the right to set up their own provincial police forces.

Quebec and Ontario were the only two provinces to make use of this constitutional right soon after Confederation. In 1905, Saskatchewan and Alberta became the first two provinces to negotiate a cost-sharing contract for the use of RCMP. Today all provinces except Quebec and Ontario have signed such contracts, with Ottawa and the provinces each sharing 50 per cent of the cost. The contracts are to be renewed in 1976 at which time the federal share is expected to drop to 40 per cent.

None of these arrangements with Ottawa caused any noticeable concern in Quebec until the late 1960s when the cost of operating an efficient provincial force began to spiral at an astronomical rate. The annual cost of supporting the Quebec police force has gone from $26 million in 1967 to $83 million for the current fiscal year. With present inflation rates and the need for increased services, that figure could easily climb over the $100 million level in a couple of years.

In addition to meeting provincial police costs, the Quebec government is also pouring more and more money into the rapidly expanding urban police forces.

With policemen demanding higher salaries, equipment costing more and citizens clamoring for better protection, the Quebec government finally decided it wanted a piece of the police-cost benefits available to other provinces. But it wanted this without giving up its police force.

Choquette's first step was to draw public attention to the matter through a headline-catching speech last January when he declared Ottawa owed Quebec $362,110,749.91 in back-payments for not using the RCMP since the federal-provincial contracts were last negotiated in 1966.

RCMP

. . . provinces to pay more

The exact figure was calculated according to the same benefit rates available elsewhere. Preliminary secret talks with federal authorities were brief and Quebec got nowhere. This inspired Choquette to add a little spice to his speech with a nationalist theme, using words one would normally associate with separatist propaganda.

"Unequal treatment of this nature seems to be in contradiction with the very notion of federalism and the notion of justice itself," said Choquette, his eyes shifting from the audience directly to the television cameras.

When the federal solicitor-general publicly rejected Quebec's claim a few weeks later, Choquette rose in the Quebec national assembly to describe Allmand as a man "with a very narrow-minded, technocratic and legalistic view of how federalism should work."

Choquette then went after the "moral support" of other Canadian provinces. First to support him was British Columbia's Attorney-General Alex Macdonald who termed Quebec's predicament "a little bit unfair." Last May, the attorneys general from all 10 provinces endorsed Quebec's claim for equal benefits even though it didn't want to shift policing duties to the RCMP.

And at another inter-provincial meeting in Quebec City earlier this week, Ontario—which also has a provincial force — demanded a precise compensation of $378 million from Ottawa for the period dating back to 1966. Allmand, who attended part of the meeting "to consult", categorically refused the Ontario request and again told Quebec that its request has no constitutional justification.

"We find it difficult to understand how Quebec can now, in 1974, claim that it should be compensated for a financial loss that it has allegedly suffered as a result of its not becoming a party to RCMP contract arrangements," read Allmand's official statement.

Can't Scrap It

Just to get Choquette's adrenalin flowing, Allmand has repeatedly invited Quebec to "come talk with us if you wish to avail yourself of RCMP services." (There are already more than 1,000 RCMP men working in Quebec but they handle only matters of federal concern.)

"This attitude is not at all realistic. You can't just scrap a police force that has taken years to build up. Bringing in the RCMP is the only solution in his (Allmand's), intellectual analysis," replied Choquette.

Choquette suspects one of the fears harbored by Ottawa is that once provincial police forces are supported financially, some provinces may terminate their contracts with the RCMP and set up their own forces.

"Ottawa will be happy to know," said Choquette, "that the consensus of the provinces using the RCMP was to keep on with the same arrangement. They don't want to have anything to do with a provincial force."

With Quebec and Ontario getting nowhere with Allmand, it appears now that any solution—if there is to be one—will have to come through talks between the provicial premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau.

"With his rational approach to federalism," said the Quebec minister, "I don't see how Trudeau can support Allmand's position."

HAROLD GREER

Three Strikes, But Not Out

TORONTO — With the New Democratic Party's surprising win in the Stormont byelection, the Davis government has now lost all three of the byelections held since the 1971 general election. All three had been staunch Conservative seats for many years and all three were held, up to their resignations, by prominent cabinet ministers.

There is, therefore, a strong temptation to conclude three strikes and out. If the NDP win in Stormont and the Liberal wins in St. George and Huron last year mean anything it would seem that the voters have at long last turned against the government and the 31-year Tory occupancy at Queen's Park is about to be terminated. That at least is how many politicians and commentators are more or less interpreting it.

The only trouble with this conclusion is that it isn't logical. While it is convenient to speak of the government's losing or winning byelections, the government in fact is not involved. Only in rare minority situations does the fate of the government turn on a byelection, and anti-government sentiment — always thriving in a democratic system — can therefore be expressed without having to worry about alternatives.

Crude Barometer

This is why byelections tend to go against the government and why governments pooh-pooh the results when they do.

In a general election, the fate of the government is what the election is all about and the question of "if not the government party, who?" is the key issue. Lacking these ingredients, byelections are notoriously crude barometers of what can be expected in the next general election.

The safest assumption perhaps is that they mean nothing, because political parties are grievously prone, by reading too much into them, to fall into strategic error.

The Ontario NDP, for example, won a byelection in Middlesex South in September of 1969, a traditionally Conservative area. The NDP then concluded that this was the breakthrough in rural Ontario it had long been fighting for. It changed its leader, became very aggressive and approached the electorate as a real threat to the Conservatives in the 1971 election. The electorate responded in alarm and voted the NDP down, including Middlesex South.

The error here was in departing from a cardinal principle of Ontario politics, which is that the Ontario electorate is essentially small-c conservative. If the NDP ever comes to power, it will do so — barring social or economic upheaval — by creeping up on the voters.

The more the electorate at large ponders the possibility of an NDP government, the more apprehensive it becomes. Strategically, this means the NDP must quietly nibble away where it is strongest, avoid dispersing its sparse resources across the province, and eschew any impression that it is about to sweep Ontario.

PREMIER DAVIS

. . . byelection bad indicator

The NDP departed from this strategy to its sorrow as a result of Middlesex South in 1969, and the danger of its victory in Stormont is that it will repeat the performance. "The Tories are in trouble everywhere in Ontario," NDP leader Stephen Lewis exulted after the votes were in. "There's no place that escapes them." This is precisely the heresy Lewis should avoid.

Conversely, Stormont was an excellent example of how the NDP can creep up on the voters. Certainly the Tories are in trouble, if not everywhere in Ontario, in enough places to make their future very uncertain; one hears this from all sides. But the NDP did not win in Stormont simply or primarily because the Tories are in trouble.

Mr. Lewis himself did not expect his party to win in Stormont. He expected, on the basis of canvassers' reports, that anti-government feeling would be very strong, strong enough perhaps to reduce the 1971 Conservative plurality of 7,099 votes to some 1,000 votes, given the absence of Fern Guindon, the popular minister of labor whose resignation (to run unsuccessfully in the federal election) prompted the byelection.

Lewis expected this anti-government vote to come to the NDP, rather than to the Liberals, because the party had in George Samis, a 31-year-old high school teacher, an excellent candidate who had surprised everyone by running second in 1971 and whose "recognition factor" this time was still very high with the voters. But Lewis still expected Mr. Samis to lose.

They Blew It

Instead Samis won by some 2,600 votes. Why? Because the Conservatives simply blew the election. Their candidate, Guy Leger, was incredibly inarticulate and unsure of himself. He apparently cannot handle public speaking and debate (a lot of people can't, but it's bad for a politician) and refused to attend all-candidate meetings. The opposition made capital of this with the empty-chair routine, with devastating effect.

Even at the major Conservative rally, with everyone prepared to cheer on cue, Leger spoke, haltingly and from a prepared text, for only three minutes. Premier Bill Davis spoke for half an hour and Guindon for 20 minutes.

The situation became so desperate towards the end of the campaign that Guindon virtually became Leger's alter ego. In the course of this, the former cabinet minister called the Liberal candidate a "separatist" (Stormont is roughly 50 per cent French-speaking), a charge which hurt the Liberals, boomeranged on the Conservatives and did the NDP no harm at all.

In short, a very interesting byelection, but don't read too much into it. The Tories, heaven help Ontar-iar-io, aren't dead yet.

Editorial Correspondence

Unrealistic Biases

It is possible that on the surface men appear to be discriminated against more than women. In the home, on television and in the schools men are taught that they must be strong, brave, independent, successful and to be free of emotions other than anger. Their only outlets from stress must be "manly"—anger, alcohol and sex. If the stress is too great they become impotent or worse. Some react by deserting home and family, turning to alcohol and dying of liver damage, getting a divorce or by bottling it up and dying of heart attacks, gastric ulcers and strokes. An independent wife would make it clear that she expects him to be successful with his family and nowhere else. If he is up-tight and impotent it is impossible for him to be a success at home. She would be able to encourage him to take a leave of absence, and would be capable of taking over the breadwinning until he is better or could find a more suitable occupation.

The sad thing is that women are taught from early childhood that their one role in life is that of wife and mother. They are taught to be dependent, not to appear too intelligent or aggressive, and not to usurp authority over a man. No typical woman's job (secretary, nurse, teller, typist, sales clerk, etc.) will support a family.

It is time to teach our sons and daughters that there are choices other than the traditional roles foisted on them by the schools and society. By correcting this kind of sex stereotyping in texts, counselling, teachers attitudes and discriminatory practices you can remove the unrealistic biases that, for too long, have adversely affected both sexes. — Alan C. Robertson, 1149 Wychbury Avenue.

From the Times of October 23, 1914

Though the organizers of the Made-in-Victoria exhibition had expected a large attendance on the opening day of the fair, the numbers that thronged the hall during the whole of yesterday exceeded all expectations. The exhibition was held to encourage home industry. Victorians could show a practical patriotism by buying locally-made articles. This would stimulate manufacture and lead to employment of more citizens which would increase the local payroll here. The organizers did not realize that in wartime, with the public mind distracted, so much could be done to place before the public in a striking way the opportunities that exist for the purchase of foodstuffs, furniture and other articles made in Victoria.

'To Be Born or to Die, It's All the Same . . .'

By SANDRO MAYER

(Mayer writes for the Italian newsmagazine Oggi. This article was adapted by the magazine Atlas World Review.)

Orphans are the tragic legacy of war in every country. There are 40,000 in Saigon. Nobody has figured out how many more live elsewhere in Vietnamese villages and mountains.

Some of the Saigon orphans are sheltered in orphanages; others live in the street. One of these is Trung. His face is dirty and his hands are black. I found him one afternoon sitting at an open bar drinking beer. He was barefoot, his hair tousled, but his white shirt and pants were clean. I found out later that he was ten years old, but he looked no more than seven. He smiled at me with begging eyes, offering me a newspaper for sale. I wasn't interested but bought it anyway. He was about to give me change from a thousand-piaster note but I said to him: "You may keep it." He left in a hurry, then came back a minute later, with a shoeshine kit, a brush, and some velvet rags. I let him shine my shoes, and gave him some more money — as much as he asked.

He ran away and returned quickly with a girl, Cau. She, too, had a newspaper, the same one Trung sold me. I bought it. She ran away and came back with a brush, shoeshine kit, and rags — the same as Trung's. I also let her shine my shoes. The girl ran away. I found her together with Trung, hiding behind a parked car. They were counting my money and laughing. The moment they saw me, Trung hid the money behind his back. "I don't want to take it away from you," I assured him. "I just want you to tell me who you are." Here is the story, as told to me by Trung: "I was three years old and my sister Cau was one when my Dad died. The war killed him. We don't even remember his face. Mom didn't have any photos of him. We were happy. We lived with my grandfather and Mom.

"We weren't rich. Nobody was rich in our village. We were right at the border to the North, a few kilometers from the communists. We were not so poor, though. We lived in a big house and me and Cau had a whole room for ourselves. Mom worked in the fields and she brought home rice for everybody. In the morning we studied. There was an old teacher and, in exchange for a little bit of food, he made the kids study. In the afternoon we went out on the street and played . . .

"Nobody had taught us about death. We knew it, we always knew it. When Mom and Grandfather died two years ago we didn't cry. It happened so suddenly. We were playing in the house of a friend, and then we heard shooting and shouting. We didn't know what to do, whether to run to Grandfather's house or to the field where Mom was. We knew, though, that something was going to happen — something very bad. A battle broke out and our village would be destroyed. The mother of our friend made us go into the house and hide in the cellar. We stayed there for two days, without food, but we were lucky because there was water to drink.

You learn to live on the street

"We came out when we heard no more shooting. We ran to our house. We were afraid we would be scolded because we stayed away so long. The house was all broken, and in front of it were a lot of people. They wouldn't let us in. They said that Grandfather was dead, that they didn't want us to see him. We asked them where Mom was. They said: 'She died, too. She was running to the house with other women and she died in the street.' They said many other people died in those two days and that we had to leave the village now.

"I remember my grandfather's words: 'To be born, or to die, it's the same thing. You don't have to cry about it. Those who remain must think and live and forget the dead! But to stay here would be bad, very bad.'

"Cau pressed my hand very hard. 'What are we going to do now?' she asked me. People had told us to go to the South. 'If you get to Saigon, you'll be able to get into an orphanage,' they said. I didn't know what an orphange was. They told us we would have food, a bed to sleep in, and there would be many other kids to play with. It seemed like fun. So we followed the people who abandoned the village and were pushing little carts with all their belongings, or carrying on their backs bags full of clothes and things to eat. But we came without anything.

"Do you know how long it took us to get to Saigon? Three months. The first days were fun. We walked together with many people of the village. There were lots of children. But then, little by little, it became boring. People would stop along the road. Others went different ways and told us to follow them. But we wanted to get to an orphange. Se we went on.

"We never were hungry. We gathered fruit in the field. If we stopped in front of a house along the road, people made us come in for a little rice. We slept outdoors, in the fields. Afraid? Why should we be afraid? Cau and me were always close.

"We were lucky it was warm. Only at night when it rained we were wet and cold. But then we found a bridge to sleep under. We walked some, hitchhiked some. Many cars passed but they were almost always full. Hardly any of them would stop for us. Do you know when we arrived in Saigon, we were a bit unhappy that the adventure was over.

"We asked where the orphange was. They told us that there were many of them. 'Which one are you looking for? Any one in particular?' They gave us the address and we were on our way. We were a little ashamed. You know, we were dirty and our clothes were torn. What are the gentlemen of the orphange going to say to us?

"But they paid no attention to our clothes. It was not a nice place, it was quite ugly. Those gentlemen asked us a lot of questions: 'What are your names? Where did you come from? Who told you to come here? You mean, you came on foot from the North, the two of you are crazy!' Then they told us we could not stay together. Boys and girls stay together in an orphanage only when they are small. I would remain here, Cau would go to another place. 'For this evening you may remain together,' they told us. 'Then we will see.'

"They took us into a large bedroom where many children were sleeping. There were no free beds so they told us to stretch out on the floor. Cau drew close to me and began to cry. I also felt like crying too, but I didn't. I didn't want to frighten Cau. We had made that whole trip to get into a place like this! In the dark, in that large room, for the first time we felt alone.

'Cau,' I said, 'get up. We must get out of here Quick, get up. Because they are going to separate us as soon as day comes.' The door was open. We walked slowly along the corridor. Then another door. There was a huge garden. We climbed up a tree. Then, one jump over the wall and we were on the road and started to run fast. We were free. But then when day came we were scared. Saigon was full of people, cars, stores, stands . . .

"We walked, holding hands, without talking, just looking around. Then we met Minh. He was a little older than us and was selling newspapers. Minh, too, had run away from the orphanage. His father had died in the war. His mother died of a terrible disease. His uncle had too many children and brought him to the orphanage. 'That place was really horrible,' he told us. 'Is it possible you didn't know it? But is it also possible to travel so far to go into an orphanage? You are really dumb . . .'

"Minh said we could become his friends. 'We will be together,' he said. 'But, if you want to eat, you must work.' We started to sell newspapers, like Minh. Then with the first earned money we bought some nails and a little wood. We built a small box. We bought some polish for shoes and a brush. We began to stop men on the street.

"A year went by. We are happy, you know? A little shoeshining, a little newspaper selling. We don't earn very much but we eat every day. We buy the stuff they sell on stands — whatever we want. We sit on the sidewalk and eat. Cau also sells little hazelnuts, to have some extra pennies. I never leave her alone. Not even for a minute.

"Where do we sleep? On the street, of course. There's a man who has a jeep. He always leaves it in the evening in the same spot. And as soon as he goes into his house, we get into the jeep, stretch out on the seats and sleep until it is day. We clean it up before we leave. He doesn't know we use his car.

"Our mother? Cau and me — we never speak of her. Grandfather was right."

Trung introduced me to his friend Minh. He was angry when he learend Trung had told me his story. "He can denounce us to the police," Minh said. "This man can have us shut in an orphanage."

"You will not tell the police, right?" Trung begged me, drawing Cau near to him. "In your town do they separate brothers from sisters?" I shook my head in denial. "Then you know why we ran away," Trung went on. "Please don't make us return there." I swore that I would not reveal where I met them, or where the jeep — their secret refuge — was parked.

Minh was a year older than Trung. His face, too, was black and his hands were grimy from shoe polish. "I find more people on the street who love me," he said, "than over there, in the orphange." Minh wanted me to meet Le Quang, one of the "organizing brains" of the street orphans.

I found him sleeping soundly on a wall parapet, some newspaper tucked under his arm. Minh and Trung awakened him with a slap. Le Quang jumped up. After Minh explained who I was, he told me that at 13 he is the oldest of the street orphans. He lost his parents three years ago. "My gang is made up of 10 kids," he said. "Cau, Trung, Minh, and six others. I am the leader. I keep them from quarreling. I assign to each one the streets where they are to sell newspapers and clean shoes. In the evening we meet and divide the money into equal shares. I work in the worst street because I am the oldest . . .

"Our work is hard. We station ourselves in front of the most beautiful hotels where there are rich tourists. We manage to eat every day, two times a day.

"We have no rules. Only one thing is important: we must never be too well-dressed or too clean because, you know, we must make people pity us. But we must not be too dirty, either, otherwise the tourists would be disgusted and not stop. I have learned this in the three years I have been living in the street."

Journalists and Plagues

By EDWARD HOAGLAND
New York Times Book Review

Nearly 40 years ago Cyril Connolly cited journalism as one of the chief "enemies of promise" (in his memoir of that name) which a young writer ought to steer clear of. Although the magazine hackwork and book reviewing he was particularly referring to does remain a rather unfruitful endeavor, it is unlikely he or any other observer could so crisply dismiss journalism now.

Any number of first books by eely, quick and yet encompassing new talents would refute the idea. If a tug-of-war were waged between the young and serious novelists round about and the serious young journalists, the latter might well win, both with respect to giftedness and numbers.

They are beset with opportunities — up to the Adam's apple in opportunities — perhaps including the possibility of "accomplishing something." Journalism itself in fact is the theatre of operations toward which a literary youngster who still believes in the American dream would naturally incline: where it might appear to him that if he tackles a large project and works hard at it he can become rich and famous, though he may be writing about the overall destruction of the American dream. (Novelists get rich too, but by a much more whimsical process.)

We may wince a bit, watching some of the journalists of a political temperament who hobnob incessantly with the useful or the mighty, cultivating one fellow, dropping another, as chameleon and power-conscious as any Congressman. At a party they flush sexually if a newsmaker enters the room, and bring to mind the maxim, which is also applied to policemen, that "it takes a thief to catch a thief." This is seldom really true of the police or of journalists either, for that matter.

Indeed, it's probably unfair to allow he-man novelists their traditional palship with boxers, bookies, prostitutes and other violent or ambiguous types, while frowning on the mesmerism which worldlier men of power exercise on the sort of journalist who has "a nose for news." There is more difficulty than this moral factor in journalism as a vehicle for talent coming with the tilt built into it of keeping up-to-date.

The individual needn't go whole hog like a newspaperman — on top of, embodying, everybody else's point of view. Unless he resists, the pressures of his profession nevertheless are going to push him into typifying in his own course of inquiry the twists and bias of his day.

But if even a first-rate journalist runs the risk of becoming a weathervane, the temptation of the earnest novelist is "posterity." He can look to posterity for a verdict on his work if he doesn't like what's come his way so far, until the danger is that in the meantime he may close his ears.

What has happened, however, which has so stunned novelists, is that for the first time since novel-writing began they have no assurance that there will be a posterity to set the record straight. This absence of a future to look to — a time of solace or of reckoning — has flummoxed plenty of other people (for example, husbands, wives) who are engaged in improbably long-term commitments too.

The task of explaining ourselves to ourselves, which is the textbook function of novel-writing, is beyond the range of anyone in any profession at the moment, but journalists at least enjoy the frontline privilege of being first to announce each new phantasmagoria that heaves in sight and then remains to be explained. They escape the sensation of being left-behind, which irritates so many novelists, and, as a technical matter, are excused from the old-fashioned, time-consuming obligation to invent a certain proportion of what they write. Because, like everybody else, they have been educated more in the history of the novel than in journalism; journalism itself sports an illusory newness, which, when the times appear gargantuan — when we feel we need new tools — is a relief.

So it has come to seem ironic that "novel'" means new; and there is a clarity to the situation in journalism appropriate to a thriving conoern. One notices among the best practitioners a grouping of big-subject men, like David Halberstam and Gay Talese, who trust in legwork and in elbow-grease. Norman Mailer and Tom Wolfe write in great haste with great gouts of talent, "winging it," like a novelist, not only on the strength of the subject but on the strength of their own recklessness.

But despite the disarray in fiction, enough glory attaches to fighting on regardless, like John Henry, with eclipsed tools, that novelists-turned-journalist sometimes look back to the old problematic, lonely drudgery of novel-writing as movie actors do to the stage — maybe that was where the action was.

The recklessness which makes for originality so often grows out of despair that artists between projects will search around for something in their lives to smash up, on occasion, just in order to be able to start from scratch. And so the Hard Times spoken of lately (never mind the necromancer's word, "Depression") may give a boost to good writing.

Holding up, with less to lose or gain in the way of royalties, his focus once again the recklessness of words and visions, a novelist can take hope as he sees that the ople of novel is no longer to explain, but rather to dramatize, us to ourselves. Here we are, on the broad scale, soon to starve, soon to freeze — what better instant to undertake a novel?

And journalists — buccaneers and slippery characters ever since their great progenitor Daniel Defoe — flourish anyway in all plague years.

A Nation of Spear-Carriers?

By GARY LAUTENS

Nobody is happier right now than the Americans. That's because they didn't take part in the Soviet-Canada hockey series.

"This is the first major war in years we haven't been involved in," a friend of mine from Buffalo commented.

"Not only did we escape the financial cost and world censure, we didn't suffer a single casualty.

"It was wonderful to be a spectator for a change."

"Was that the general feeling in the States?" I asked.

"Yes," he answered. "As soon as we heard about the hooking and spearing and high-sticking, I said to my wife, 'Thank God they're not our boys over there!' "

"We don't like the boarding and butt-ending any more than you," I said. "In fact, this is a role Canada didn't want. But somebody has to stop Yakushev, Maltsev and the other Russian stars.

"By facing-off with the Soviets now, and laying on a little lumber, we hope to make the world safe for our Little Leaguers to make passes and play the slot tomorrow."

"That's the trouble with you Canadians — you want to be the policeman of international shinny. As soon as anyone drops a puck, you get in on it.

"Why don't you disarm your hockey players and take away their slapshots and hip checks before it's too late?

"This hockey series can only escalate into an annual thing — and that means more arguments, more bickering about the time clock, more heated words about the refereeing.

"If you don't care about yourselves, think about the rest of us.

"We don't want to get drawn into a hockey tournament where a single obscene gesture could set off a global riot."

"Obviously you're not familiar with the domino theory," I replied. "If we retreat from Moscow arena, next it will be Prague, Helsinki, Stockholm.

"Soon we won't be able to lift an elbow anywhere east of Quebec city and the ice rinks of Europe will be lost to Team Soviet.

"That's why we're already preparing to play the Russians again in 1976.

"We owe that to our forwards, defencemen and goalkeepers who have been cut, bruised and pulled their groins in previous series."

"In that case," my American friend warned, "don't be surprised if we demonstrate in front of the Canadian embassy in Washington and burn Rick Ley's fists in effigy."

Daily Spot Gold Quotes Planned When U.S. Allows Buying Jan. 2

NEW YORK (CP) — Plans to provide a daily spot gold quotation were announced Tuesday by the chairman of the International Monetary Market (IMM) a branch of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Leo Melamed said the spot market will be established Jan. 2, the day it becomes legal for Americans to buy and sell gold, as a complement to the IMM's previously-announced plans to set up a futures market for trading in gold.

Melamed told a news conference there was no reason Americans should continue to depend solely on foreign quotations for gold buy-sell transactions started and completed in the U.S. spot gold prices used throughout the world at present originate in London and Zurich.

The IMM was set up several years ago by the Chicago Mercantile Exchange to provide a vehicle for trade in foreign currencies.

Mark Powers, senior vice-president of the IMM, said the market already has three or four Canadian members and hopes that number will grow.

He declined to speculate whether operation of the new Chicago market will substantially cut into trade on the Winnipeg Gold Exchange, established several years ago to provide a Canadian market for trade in gold.

"I suspect we may limit their total growth," he said.

However, he suggested the Chicago gold market might help the Winnipeg operation in its early stages through the process of arbitrage, trade developed because of a difference in prices between two markets.

Powers said spot quotes will be fixed on the Chicago market during five-minute trading periods two or three times a day.

"There is evidence that London dealers will be participating in the gold market in this country and the establishment of a U.S. market that corresponds to their London market should facilitate their business.

The fact that the IMM will be providing a competitive spot market at a different time of the day than London should be particularly advantageous to them."

Powers said he thought there was a possibility that the U.S. Treasury might enter the gold market with some of its gold stocks to use them as a stabilizing device if the price of gold went too high.

He said he expects five or six other gold markets to be opened in the U.S. when gold trade becomes legal, including two others in Chicago, two in New York and one in San Francisco.

Private ownership of gold — except for jewelry and coins held by collectors — has been prohibited in the United States since the country went off the gold standard in the early 1930s. Congress recently passed a law removing the ban effective Jan.

Westcoast Trans.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. report earnings of $18,641,000 after provision for preferred share dividends, or $2.15 a common share, for the first nine months of 1974.

This compares with net income of $18,328,000 or $2.14 a common share for the same period in 1973.

The company said that previously reported 1973 earnings were restated to reflect a retroactive change in accounting for increased gas costs and in addition, received the proceeds of a $40 million issue of preferred shares in July 1974.

The dividend requirement of $698,630 for these shares to Sept. 30 was deducted from net income for the calculation of earnings a common share this year. A dividend of $1.59 a preferred share will be payable Dec. 1 to shareholders of record at Nov. 8, for the period July 17 to Nov. 30.

C. Pac. Investments

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. reports consolidated net income of $99.1 million for the first nine months of 1974, an increase of 91 per cent over the $51.8 million earned in the corresponding period in 1973.

Net income for the quarter ended Sept. 30 was $35.9 million, an increase of $22.2 million, the company says.

After preferred dividends, earnings per common share for the first nine months were $1.75, compared with 96 cents in the same period last year.

On a fully diluted basis, which assumes that all preferred stock is converted to common and all warrants are exercised, earnings per common share were $1.56 over the period, up 73 cents.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. reports consolidated net income for the first nine months of the year at $129.3 million U.S. or $3.75 a share, compared with $54.6 million or $1.60 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Consolidated shipments of aluminum in all forms totalled 1,294,700 tons for the first nine months of 1974, compared with 1,269,300 tons for the first nine months of 1973.

EARNINGS

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Alliance Building Corp. Ltd., nine months ended Sept. 30: 1974, $1,813,000, $1.27 a share; 1973, $997,000, 74 cents.

Asbestos Corp. Ltd., nine months ended Sept. 30: 1974, $7,170,000, $2.53 a share; 1973, $208,000, loss, no per-share figure.

Baton Broadcasting Inc., year ended Aug. 31: 1974, $3,671,000, 53.1 cents a share; 1973, $2,883,000, 42 cents.

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., nine months ended Sept. 30: 1974, $99,063,000, $1.75 a share; 1973, $45,191,000, 83 cents.

Bumpers Cutting Damage

TORONTO (CP) — State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. says energy-absorbing bumpers being installed on new cars are apparently reducing vehicle damage, especially in low-speed collisions.

In a brief to a Society of Automobile Engineers meeting, the company says expected savings in repair costs have not been realized primarily because of the high initial cost and the replacement cost of the bumpers when badly damaged in high-speed collisions.

The insurance company says that as a result the maximum potential savings, such as lower insurance premiums, are not being realized by the consumer.

CFP ACQUIRES 62% OF CORNAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of Cornat Industries Ltd. of Vancouver have accepted a takeover bid by Canadian Forest Products Ltd.

CFB offered Monday to buy 2,650,000 shares of Cornat at $6.50 each which would give it 50.2 per cent in the diluted equity of Cornat.

Colin Dobell, vice-president of Wood Gundy Ltd. here, said that 4,219,540 shares were submitted. Cornat reported that at Sept. 30, it had 4,831,438 shares outstanding CFP specified it would take the shares on a pro rata basis if more than 2,650,000 were submitted.

CFB now will have a 62.8 per cent ownership of Cornat.

Previous high trading for Cornat was in 1973 when shares traded at $5.75. Last Friday, they were at $3.90. Trading was halted here and in Toronto while the offer, made by Wood Gundy through the Vancouver and Toronto stock exchanges, was open. Trading will resume today.

This represents a major diversification for Vancouver-based CFP. Its first outside the forest industry.

Margarine Prices Chase, Pass Butter

NEW YORK (AP) — In parts of the United States margarine is no longer "the lower-priced spread."

Rising prices for corn and soybean oil, margarine's major components, have reduced the price difference between margarine and butter. Many of the fancier margarines now exceed butter in price in some areas of the U.S.

Bob Anderson, executive director of the American Butter Institute in Chicago, says that as a result butter sales are "very, very good," with many dairies working extra shifts to meet the demand.

Industry officials say that in the past, butter was nearly three times the price of the average margarine. But in the last year, crop shortages and commodity speculation have pushed up market prices for corn and soybean oil.

It's primarily the soft, corn-oil margarines which are exceeding butter in cost in some regions.

However, a spokesman for Standard Brands, Inc., makers of Fleischmann's margarine, says there's now some feeling that the oil markets have reached their upper limits and may be headed down.

ADJUDICATORS' CLERK
Starting Salary $754

A number of vacancies are open for a new position in the Rehabilitation Services and Claims Department. These positions are open in our Vancouver office and in the following area offices:

Courtenay, Cranbrook, Chilliwack, Fort St. John, Kamloops, Vernon, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo, Nelson, Prince George, Penticton, Terrace, Williams Lake, Victoria

The adjudicators' clerk will be responsible for carrying out all the routine clerical duties for claims adjudicators. This will include simple telephone contacts to obtain routine data on claims. It also involves maintaining records, filing documents, arithmetical calculations, and the general handling and preparation of paper work for presentation to the adjudicators. This position does not involve any responsibility for decision making on a claim.

The successful candidate should have the ability to work quickly and accurately with a variety of complex files and documents. A Grade XII education level or experience in similar kinds of work at the Workers' Compensation Board is required.

The successful candidates for area offices will be required to undergo a period of training in our Vancouver office.

Applications should be submitted to the Personnel Department —

Urgency Stressed on Upcoming Canada-France Energy Talks

By DAVID MacDONALD
Special to The Times

PARIS — Canada and France yesterday agreed to add a note of urgency to planned talks on co-operation in the energy field by arranging a meeting at ministerial level early in the new year.

A government spokesman said the working committee of Canadian and French experts that the two governments agreed on Monday should begin work next month, will be instructed to have information and proposals ready in time for the ministerial level meeting. Canada's leading representative in this meeting will be Alastair Gillespie, minister of industry, trade and commerce who is already scheduled to visit France next year with a group of Canadian businessmen looking at business prospects.

The meeting will be held in Canada and will be held within the format of an existing France-Canada committee on economic matters that was set up 15 years ago and usually has meetings about every 18 months, alternating between France and Canada for the location.

Besides such energy areas as petroleum and nuclear power, the working group will assess whether French technology might help Canada in the more efficient use of coal. The group also will look at industrial co-operation possibilities, especially in transportation.

This will include surface transport systems, marine and aerospace projects such as STOL, helicopters and Canada's water bombers.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing accepted an invitation from Trudeau to visit Canada, although no date was set.

The French government gave its permission for Canada to set up a consulate general at Strasbourg, similar to the one now in existence at Bordeaux.

Canada agreed to consider the request of the French government that Air France be granted landing rights in the lucrative Toronto airport market.

The Canadian delegation told the French that Canada will be strongly pursuing a hoped-for treaty with the European Economic Community at the same time as trying to expand, diversify and keep in equilibrium its trade with France.

The Canadian position on the Common Market trade agreement was put with "considerable force" according to one Canadian diplomat and the French were told that Canada would be speaking in the same terms to market officials in Brussels later this week.

The French were reported to have voiced sympathy and understanding of Canada's desire for a contractual agreement with the Common Market and even said that if Canada were unhappy with the result of the market talks that France would be happy to discuss the matter again with Canada and try to help.

This French reaction, as related by a Canadian government official, tends to throw doubt on reports that came out of a closed meeting of market ministers in Strasbourg last week in which France was said to have been opposed to a "contractual" market agreement with Canada.

France raised an undisclosed point about the Canadian continental shelf off Newfoundland but Trudeau explained that aspects of the continental shelf could not yet be discussed because Ottawa still had not completed talks on the shelf with Newfoundland.

Share Food, Fuel Canadians Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Tuesday night Canada, in following its foreign policy priorities, may have to ask its citizens to make sacrifices.

The new minister told the commons defence and external affairs committee Canadians may have to be asked to "postpone the satisfaction of their own immediate needs in favor of the greater need of others."

"Whether it be food or energy, Canadians should not expect to enjoy indefinitely much greater advantages than others," he said.

The minister made the remarks in a statement that gives an indication of his philosophy on foreign affairs.

The minister also said Canada and the United States can no longer claim special consideration from one another as a matter of course.

He said the new kind of relationship, a state of "dynamic tension," between the two countries will be healthy but at times difficult.

On other matters the minister also expressed confidence that Canada will take a leadership role at the World Food Conference at Rome next month.

'Germ Laden' Burger Prompts Test Prod

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Hamburger sold in some supermarkets is potentially dangerous and could cause food poisoning members warned in the commons Tuesday as they called on the federal government to step up its food testing procedures across Canada.

Ground beef is the largest single item of consumer beef purchased in the country. It accounts for nearly 30 per cent of the total consumption of retail beef cuts, according to a study made this year by the Food Prices Review Board.

Consequently MP's worried when tests made by the University of Guelph issued this week, showed that of 108 samples of ground beef taken from 28 supermarkets, representing the major food chains in eastern Canada, 46 per cent contained staphylococci bacteria.

Staphylococci bacteria is dangerous to humans and can cause food poisoning, James McGrath PC—St. John's East alerted the house.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has assured the members that this country has one of the best food inspection services. He was confident that the food inspectors were doing their job. He said he would check on the reports of germ laden minced beef.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said his department has already taken action against the persons who violated the pure food regulations. He said he has asked that "very special attention be given to these inspections."

He promised his department will not fail to take action those who do not comply with the rules.

In the commons Tuesday Mr. McGrath alerted the members to the study conducted by the university and its findings. He said it had been aired over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and was worrying Canadians.

He moved that the federal government give immediate consideration to implementing the recommendations contained in the Food Prices Review Board report on ground beef. It was issued last June.

One of the seven recommendations called for a stepped up inspection of low priced meats across Canada. It said they should be tested for fat content, sulphite, foreign matter and bacterial content.

Violations of the standards and requirements of the Food and Drugs act pertaining to these meats should be more severely penalized and widely publicized, said the board.

McGrath's motion required unanimous consent to be passed by the house. Some Liberal backbenchers shouted "no" and it was not put to a vote.

Gov't to Probe Staff Relations

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor relations in the public service are expected to receive close scrutiny by Parliament following a decision Tuesday to set up a special committee to investigate the subject.

The Commons gave unanimous support to Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp's motion to set up a joint Senate-Commons committee to examine the Public Service Staff Relations Act. Fourteen members of the Commons will be appointed to the committee while the Senate has been invited to nominate some of its members.

The committee will look into the subject in the light of a recent report on public service employer-employee relations by Jacob Finkelman, chairman of the public service staff relations board. The Finkelman report is the first major study of public service labor relations since public servants got the right to strike in 1967.

The report suggests maintaining the right to strike, but recommends that the government have the right to lock out its employees.

The committee inquiry fulfils a government promise of such a study before any changes are made to the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

Walter Baker (PC — Grenville-Carleton), whose Ottawa riding contains thousands of civil servants, welcomed the committee study and said it must look at the issues from the employees' point of view.

'Hell Hole' Vets Ask Pension Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee heard again Tuesday of the sufferings of men who survived imprisonment by the Japanese in Hong Kong during the Second World War and renewed a plea for a better break for them.

The veterans affairs committee unanimously voted to ask the government to increase pensions to those veterans, especially those unable to work.

The Hong Kong Veterans Association of Canada said in a brief that the situation involving these veterans of the "hell holes" and concentration camps on the island 29 years ago is such that even the relatively generous treatment of the government to date is not enough.

The brief, accompanied by medical evidence on the effects of such things as vitamin deficiency and stress which lead to heart trouble, arthritis and premature aging, said:

"The Hong Kong veterans were subjected to such harsh physical treatment, severe mental stress, it is only reasonable to state to this day these men still suffer from the effects of their prolonged internment."

The government already has acknowledged the special position of these veterans, now about 1,100 in number, and all receive at least a 50 per cent disability pension.

That amounts to about $209 a month for a single man and $261 for a married man without children.

The association said that is not enough and the committee agreed that all Hong Kong veterans who are unable to work should receive 100 per cent disability.

The committee passed a similar motion last spring.

JAMES EARL RAY BACK IN COURT

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — James Earl Ray, confessed assassin of Martin Luther King Jr., was cajoled, warned and browbeaten into pleading guilty by his former lawyer, Ray's current attorney said.

At a federal hearing Tuesday to determine if Ray can get a new trial, attorney Bernard Fensterwald also said Ray's mail was photostated and sent to the prosecutor's office while Ray was held in a county jail before entering his guilty plea. Witnesses Tuesday confirmed Ray's mail had been copied.

At the same time, Robert Livingston, another attorney for Ray, said the defendant had not been given enough time to prepare his testimony and would not take the stand today.

Ray was transported to Memphis from the Nashville State Penitentiary, where he is serving 99 years for the King assassination April 4, 1968, just 36 hours before he entered the courtroom of U.S. district judge Robert McRae Tuesday, flanked by federal marshals.

"We thought he'd be here at least a week before the hearing," said Livingston. "We're forced to call on our enemies first."

Fensterwald, of Washington, D.C., opened the hearing ordered by the 6th U.S. circuit court of appeals by accusing Texas attorney Percy Foreman of pressuring Ray to plead guilty March 10, 1969, with threats of conviction and electrocution should the Missouri state prison escapee be tried.

Muskie No Candidate, But Has Aspirations

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie would still like to be President, he said Tuesday, even though presently he is not an active candidate.

"It would not be honest for me to say I have no interest in it," Muskie told reporters who inquired about his presidential candidacy plans.

At another point the Maine senator showed his interest directly when he interrupted a reporter who was asking him what he thought about the theory that those who are bitten by "the presidential bug" never get over it.

"There's a lot to that," Muskie said.

At times during the breakfast meeting he gave the impression of a prospective candidate who would be more than willing to become a candidate if the Democrats are unable to produce any clear-cut presidential choice. Muskie clearly believes that is a possibility.

Psychiatry Worried Margaret

TORONTO — Margaret Trudeau said she was "very frightened" when she entered hospital recently knowing she was classified as emotionally ill.

In an interview with Carole Taylor to be aired Sunday on the CTV program W5, Mrs. Trudeau said she did not feel ill at the time.

"Our tradition, I guess, is that when we're sick we turn to a doctor," she said. "I didn't feel sick, I just felt very, very weary and emotionally tight."

Mrs. Trudeau said she was a young woman who "prepared myself for my marriage to Pierre Trudeau but didn't prepare myself for my marriage to the prime minister."

She said she found it difficult to appear calm and imperturable all the time, when "I get as angry as anybody."

"I long for the day when I no longer will be the prime minister's wife, when I can just be Pierre's wife."

Mrs. Trudeau said her family doctor referred her to a psychiatrist.

She said that any Canadian should be able to go to a psychiatrist for help and not be ashamed about it.

TOKYO — Union leader Toshinobu Aburao slashed his stomach with a fruit knife in an abortive suicide attempt after failing to settle a labor dispute, police said today.

The company recently sold the plant and announced plans to dismiss most of the 300 employees. Aburao tried unsuccessfully to block the move, but fell into a deep depression when he failed, police said.

LOS ANGELES — A woman filed a $1.1 million civil suit Tuesday against television star David Carradine, charging he "negligently and carelessly lost control of his senses" through drugs or drink and assaulted her.

The naked, bleeding Carradine, star of the "Kung Fu" show, leaped from his car, hit her, tried to tear off her clothes and called her a "witch," Anrick Marie Kilty said in her suit filed in superior court.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Thomas Harris, author of the best-selling book "I'm OK, You're OK" has paid $50,000 to a 34-year-old woman who accused him of keeping her as a mistress under the influence of drugs and liquor, her attorney said.

Patricia Ann Crocco said in her suit she became a patient of Harris, a psychiatrist, in 1965 for treatment of "emotional, physical and mental disorders," and subsequently divorced her husband on Harris' advice.

She said Harris told her they would marry someday, and kept her under his influence with drugs and alcohol. She said she was later dismissed from her job.

Harris could not be reached for comment. His attorney declined to discuss the settlement, but he said Harris had filed an answer to the suit "denying 99 per cent of her charges."

OTTAWA — CBC president Laurent Picard indicated Tuesday he probably will step down within two or three years to make way for a new man.

"At some point in the next two or three years, there might be some need for new blood," he told the Commons broadcasting committee. "One shouldn't stay . . . very long."

Butler Angrily Denies 'Fortune Hunter' Tag

LONDON (AP) — The Evening News says that lawyers for Happy Rockefeller's aunt Rachel Fitler offered Welsh butler Michael Wilson $48,000 not to marry the millionairess nearly 50 years his senior.

The News says Wilson told it he refused — "I got very angry and told them I am not a fortune hunter" — and that Miss Fitler said at her home near Philadelphia:

"I have no intention of changing my mind. The more they press me, the more determined I am to marry Mr. Wilson."

The newspaper says Miss Fitler's lawyers "were expected to make one more attempt today to get the couple to call it off.'

"I think it is because I am a miner's son that they feel I am not fitted to marry Miss Fitler," said Wilson, a handsome 29-year-old who is visiting his mother in the Welsh town of Llay.

Wilson said the difference in their ages is irrelevant because their relationship is based on companionship.

No UIC Premium Hike in '75

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance premium rates will not be increased in 1975 because of a surplus this year in the employee-employer account, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

Andras told the Commons manpower committee that premium rates for 1974 have met the needs of the unemployment insurance account.

The employee-employer share of payments into the account cover costs of the program to a ceiling of four per cent unemployment. The government pays the balance.

Employees pay a premium of $1.40 for each $100 of insurable earnings and employers pay $1.96 for each $100 of insurable earnings as their contribution into the account.

The premiums were increased last January for 1974 and were also raised in January, 1973, after benefit payments exceeded the amount predicted when the revised unemployment insurance program went into effect.

Andras told the committee in a statement that the new premium rates, "coupled with increased administrative effectiveness" have left the employee-employer account with a surplus which could rise to $87 million by the end of the month.

The surplus could climb to $100 million before the end of 1974, barring adverse economic conditions, he added.

"This surplus will . . . be applied to the elimination of the deficit which accumulated in the employee-employer account during the initial trial years of the new legislation," Andras said.

Andras said the government was continuing to examine the Unemployment Insurance Act to ensure that it was achieving its objectives.

The government has promised changes to the act to encourage re-entry of the jobless into the work force and make the program more responsive to regional interests.

But the July 8 federal election prevented the introduction of changes into Parliament earlier, government spokesmen say.

Report Review Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — All major government-commissioned reports should be scrutinized by special Senate committees a year after their release, Senator David Croll (L-Ontario) said Tuesday.

He told the Senate the committees, after examining the reports, could "disclose publicly which of the findings were implemented, with appraisal and analysis of their merits."

There is a proliferation of federal reports, representing "formidable expenditures of public money and an impressive investment of time and energy by some of Canada's best minds."

However, most of these documents are destined to go on to "some subterranean valhalla reserved for government reports" because their is no public evaluation.

"In this age of awareness and the need for more and better information about government, an extra function by the Senate would generate immediate public support," Senator Croll said.

A follow-up system also would result in improved quality of reports prepared for the government.

Senator Croll said members of the 102-seat appointed Senate are well euipped to review the reports.

GRITS OPEN ON BILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has invited constructive criticism from opposition MPs when they study the government's competition bill in committee.

"I am open to any suggestions that can be made," he told the Commons when the bill, introduced in two previous Parliaments without being passed, came up for second-reading debate Tuesday.

Once it receives second reading, it goes to the Commons finance committee for clause-by-clause study.

The request for opposition suggestions to improve the bill came less than two weeks after former consumer affairs minister Herb Gray criticized the government's anti-inflation efforts and urged it to move ahead with competition legislation.

The bill is the first of a two-stage competition program. Gray dropped from the cabinet in August, asked the government to move ahead quickly with both parts. The second bill has not been introduced.

Ouellet said Tuesday the bill before the Commons takes into account the criticisms and advice given since a review of competition policies was launched by the government eight years ago.

French-Speaking Immigrants Favored

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be an emphasis on encouraging immigration of French-speaking people to Canada despite a general tightening of immigration rules, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

"I want to stress our resolve to continue to encourage the flow of francophone immigrants to Canada within the constraints established by the new regulations," he said in a Commons statement outlining the regulations.

Questioned by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Andras maintained that the new regulations will apply universally.

"However, we are engaged in talks with the Quebec government in recognition of the necessity that Canada maintain a larger number of Francophones."

This would be accomplished through such measures as increased recruitment effort in French-language countries.

In his statement, Andras specified "universality and non-discrimination in the application of selection criteria" as one of the basic principles that the new regulations respect.

Immigration was one of the subjects discussed in Paris Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau and French President Valery Giscard d-Estaing.

GET IN TOUCH JUDGES TOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — Judges should not sit on the bench until they first acquire a knowledge and understanding of the environments in which prisoners live and policemen work, the Commons justice committee was told Tuesday.

Mr. Justice A. Lamer, vice-chairman of the Law Reform Commission, added that people who administer the law are frequently out of touch with the values of the people with whom they deal.

Tighter Control Of IUDs Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde proposed Tuesday regulations that would submit intra-uterine devices (IUDs) to tighter control under the Food and Drugs Act.

Under the proposed regulations, manufacturers would have to submit data to the health department establishing the safety and effectiveness of a new IUD before marketing.

Permission to market the device would be given only after full evaluation by the health department, the minister said in a statement.

Manufacturers also would be required to keep and forward to the department all reports received on adverse reactions to IUDs.

How to set your mind at ease about your hemorrhoids.

How to set your mind at ease about your hemorrhoids.

When you have hemorrhoids, what you don't know can hurt you, and worry you. And keep you from seeing your doctor. When, he's the one person who can help you the most. To take hemorrhoids out of the mystery category, here are some things it may help you to know.

What hemorrhoids are.

Hemorrhoids are veins which become swollen and twisted like varicose veins in the legs. They can be painful, itchy and embarrassing. But they're not generally considered dangerous.

What causes hemorrhoids?

Causes include straining from constipation; diarrhea; harsh laxatives; pelvic pressure during pregnancy; and constant standing or sitting in a fixed position.

7 tips for the hemorrhoid sufferer.

The makers of Anusol Plus have spent years of research on methods of treating hemorrhoids. Here are 7 tips to help your condition.

1. Follow a bland diet. Eat lots of fresh fruit and vegetables. Drink plenty of water; steer clear of spicy foods.

2. Avoid harsh laxatives. For constipation, use a mild laxative such as Agarol.

3. Get plenty of exercise.

4. Keep the affected area clean and dry. Wash with fresh cotton and warm water. Pat dry.

5. To ease the pain, sponge with hot water, then cold.

6. Use a reliable hemorrhoid medication. Besides providing relief from pain, a good medication will also curb infection and inflammation—thus giving your hemorrhoids a chance to heal. New Anusol Plus does all of these things and more. Available in new cream form as well as suppositories, it contains a new anaesthetic ingredient to quickly relieve hemorrhoid pain. And it's silky smooth. So it goes on easily. Even on areas that are tender and inflamed.

7. If your hemorrhoids become a worry, see your doctor. He can help to set your mind at ease. And read the free, helpful booklet that comes with new Anusol Plus. Available at pharmacies only, it's a hemorrhoid medication that sets your pain at ease.

Jubilee Emergency To Expand by 50%

The emergency department at Royal Jubilee Hospital will be enlarged by about 50 per cent, Dr. A. C. Pickles, the hospital's executive director, said Tuesday.

Pickles said the additional space is needed to meet the increasing workload. The department is now handling 45,000 to 50,000 cases a year.

The expansion is an interim move but likely to serve for several years, until the hospital's master plan is developed.

Introduction of emergency room physicians at the hospital last year, together with radiology and laboratory services to support them, has contributed to an increasing number of patients being treated in the emergency department, said Pickles.

"We have the people and the equipment and we need the space."

The expansion will take place adjacent to the present main floor location and is made possible in part by transfer of the day care surgery to Memorial Pavilion, formerly Veterans' Hospital.

Plans for the expansion are now being drawn. No date for anticipated completion is available.

BURNING ROMANCE

RACCULA, Sicily (UPI) — The letter Antonietta Caruso, 16, sent her boyfriend in Palermo was so ardent that she thought a warning was in order.

"Explosive letter," she wrote on the outside.

When a mail sorter saw what was written on the envelope, he called a bomb disposal expert. He found nothing but police charged Antonietta with causing a false alarm, for which she could get up to six months in jail.

SHELTER HEAT COMES FROM WOOD

Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd has beaten the energy crisis at her Good Shepherd Shelter by installing 12 wood-burning stoves.

The conversion from oil-burners at her Mill Bay animal shelter may save up to $700 a month this winter, she reports.

Fuel costs, according to an account in the Shepherd's Crook—bulletin of the Good Shepherd Foundation represent 10 per cent of the shelter's monthly operating bill.

Mother Cecilia said the property has plenty of wood on it; "it is a pity not to use it," although it will keep someone "very busy chopping and sawing."

Wood burning stoves are in popular demand by conservation-minded people, particularly with the rising cost of fuel oil, but Mother Cecilia said she was able to buy them locally.

At the same time, she said the foundation has elected to spend $5,000 on the first phase of a security fence around the acreage, which was bid at about $38,000 for the entire 7,778 feet.

The job was considered essential in view of growing residential development around the shelter and the neighbors' resentment of the wandering animals.

Dogs will no longer be confirned to exercise runs when the fence project is completed, she said, and there will be less theft and vandalism on the property.

5,000 Students Enter Chess Tourney

Some 5,000 youngsters from six southern Vancouver Island school districts will take part in this year's C-FAX annual chess championship, organizer Cyril Large said Tuesday.

This year the tournament has expanded to include students from the Gulf Islands, Cowichan and Lake Cowichan school districts, while in previous years only students from Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke elementary schools were involved.

Chess players from Grades 1 to 7 will be competing with others their own grade to find the best player in each grade in each school.

When this competition finishes on or before Nov. 30, inter-school competition will begin.

When the competition ends in March a top chess player for each grade will be chosen, from students throughout the six districts.

Large said children play at lunchtime and after school, and are often encouraged by teachers and parents.

"It's a fun way of learning to think," he said.

Children can start playing chess at 5, he said, and can play a pretty good game by age 6.

The first championship was held in 1971, he said, and last year it involved 3,500 children.

town talk

A Saanich man's potato patch has produced a "hot potato" for council's public works committee.

The problem is the potato-grower has decided to utilize road allowance for his Victory Garden and a neighbor is complaining of the "mutilation of the boulevard".

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren counselled the committee:

"The patch does not restrict vehicular or pedestrian movement within the road allowance. The only problem, as we can see, is one of esthetics."

Ald. Fred Severson observed the potato patch appeared to be "a good land use" and Ald. Sandy Noel, "You can't live by bread alone!"

Ald. Les Passmore asked if the spud grower confined his crop to the boulevard or was his own property also yielding its share of produce.

The committee will forego a decision until this fact has been checked out.

Meanwhile, municipal clerk Gord Hayward has suggested the potato cultivator should have a boulevard permit, restricted to this year's crop if necessary for neighborly rapport.

Along with the seemingly non-stop sunshine of this amazing summerlike fall, Victorians are enjoying a number of by-products and out-of-season "extras."

For instance, those flower-filled window boxes that make a gay splash of color against the beige exterior of City Hall. Parks director Cliff Bate says normally by this time of year the geraniums and petunias and so forth have long been exchanged for sober evergreen shrubs.

But, at least on the shady Centenial Square side of the building, this year the flowers just don't want to admit defeat. Long may they flourish!

Museum Dies Dec. 31 . . . Unless

The Maritime Museum of B.C. in Bastion Square will close its doors and liquidate all assets Dec. 31, unless governments come through with financial help immediately, museum director Col. J. W. D. Symons said today.

He said the museum trustees voted Tuesday night to take that course of action as the only way to avoid "financial disaster."

"We've reached the end of the line and unless a miracle happens and the three levels of government co-operate in helping our finances, we feel we should pack it in."

Symons said the museum's problems were compounded by an eviction notice from the city of Victoria which said the museum must vacate the courthouse building by March 31, 1975.

"The city has offered us the Malahat Building (on Wharf Street) but we'd be looking at a capital cost of $750,000 to get the location in shape."

In addition, he said, the operating budget for next year has been estimated at $108,000 and the museum could see "its way clear" to finding only $36,000, leaving a shortfall of $72,000.

"I'm one of the museum types who feels no museum in the true sense of the word operates to make money — but to preserve our history. It has to operate on grants."

Symons, director of the museum for 14 years, nine of which have been spent at the courthouse building, said that if the city cancelled its eviction notice, the museum might be able to continue operation.

"But we've spent 14 years jumping from precipice to precipice (finding funds) and we need more stability in the financial outlook."

Every effort will be made to make sure the collection — assessed at $250,000 six years ago — is kept as a single entity. Symons said he'd like to see all exhibits, including the three-masted Tilikum schooner which is considered the most valuable asset, remain in the provincial capital.

A general meeting of all museum members has been called for Nov. 12 when ways of disposing of the collection will be considered.

The press conference this morning was attended by Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst who suggested a solution would be locating the museum's exhibits in the old Crystal Gardens.

"The Provincial Museum needs more space and the Maritime exhibit could be administrated by the Provincial Museum as an adjunct," Gorst said.

City council has given no indication of future plans for the courthouse building other than its use should be planned to include a variety of cultural and civic community activities.

"What do they want? More itty-bitty boutiques and sex shops?" asked museum trustee Jim McCrossan.

Dan Gallacher, curator of history at the Provincial Museum, said he was "dismayed" to hear of the likelihood of the Maritime Museum closing.

"Their collection is outstanding and absolutely essential to an understanding of history in B.C.," he said.

Asked if the Provincial Museum would accept the Maritime Museum collection he said that would have to be a government decision.

"But it's vital that collection, built over the years, be retained in British Columbia and in my view the Provincial Museum is the only institution capable of taking it on, caring for it, strengthening it over the years and displaying it in a manner worthy of it."

It will be years before the Victoria-based weatherships Quadra and Vancouver will be replaced by satellites.

This was the assurance given today when Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve greeted the Quadra on her return from a five-month international scientific exercise off West Africa.

The minister was asked, after she had lauded Quadra's contribution to the weather probe in which 17 countries took part, whether Quadra and her sister ship were in danger of being outdated by satellites.

Through Dr. R. W. Stewart, chairman of the exercise's organizing committee, reporters were told the two ships would continue their watches on Station Papa, 900 miles out in the Pacific, until at least 1982.

Stewart said American weather experts considered the Station Papa data the most important information available and even when satellites could take over more of the work now done by the two ships there would be a need for some sort of base in this vicinity.

Mme. Sauve and other Ottawa officials praised the crew and scientists working on the project for having established Canada as a leading participant in the GARP Atlantic Tropical Experiment (G.A.T.E.), which was the first major international experiment of the Global Atmospheric Research Program.

"She (Quadra) bristled with advanced instrumentation," Mme. Sauve said, "much of it designed in Canada; innovative equipment which passed this demanding test with flying colors."

She said Quadra's cargo of tapes and other material gleaned from the weather probe would do much to help scientists to discover means in which to predict weather patterns faster, more efficiently and for longer periods ahead.

She presented Quadra's master, Randy Dykes, with a special plaque marking Canada's pride in his ship's achievements.

Dykes said the morale of his men had been high, in spite of the high humidity in which they had to work.

Ships from 14 countries took part in the exercise and Dykes said it had been a geat experiment in international exchange.

Asked if language communication had been any problem, Dykes quipped:

"Bad language, maybe!" then went on:

"When people couldn't understand English, things had to be translated into Russian sentence by sentence, paragraph by paragraph, and back again. It made conferences twice as long as I'd like to have seen them.'

The environment minister was asked her government's position on the proposed super oil tanker route through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to Puget Sound.

She said a "stocktaking meeting" was planned for Canada and U.S. officials, to be held in Washington, D.C. in early November.

She said the Canadian government wants better traffic control, a closer look at navigational aids, and were investigating alternative ways of transporting Arctic oil.

Library Talks Public

For the first time, initial management-labor talks on a new contract between Greater Victoria Public Library and 60 employees will be public.

The open meeting Nov. 4 should show what the union is demanding, library board chairman Shirley Dowell said Tuesday.

The employees are represented at the bargaining table by local 410 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

"The union isn't going to like it but that doesn't matter," said Dowell.

CUPE's field representative could not be reached for comment.

Meanwhile, the library will likely operate at a deficit this year for the first time in more than five years, library board vice-chairman Gordon Hutchison told the board.

The deficit has been forecast at $1,700 on a total expenditure of $1,250,237.

The bulk of library revenue comes from local municipalities, and any over-expenditure will likely also be covered by these governments, said board members.

Although the library is 12th in size in Canada, its expenditures are 19th on the list, library board members said.

"We're going backwards instead of forwards," said chairman Dowell. She said the library has been moving down the list in comparative expenditures over the past few years.

Dollar expenditure is not a strict indication of services being provided, board members agreed, but Victoria's library does need more money, they said.

"We run a tight ship," Dowell said, and the board doesn't throw money away. The library should be spending more and providing more, she said.

Victoria's library is also second in book circulation per capita in Canada.

"But we're not providing the services some other libraries are," said board member Clyde Savage.

The board decided to hire former newspaperman Pat Murphy of Victoria to do two months' public relations for the library so that increased public knowledge will result, in increased public funds.

Back to the Files

Government officials today began searching for a new conciliator for teacher-school board contract talks on Vancouver Island after discovering the first conciliator they appointed is away on vacation.

Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm was officially appointed to the job late Monday and it wasn't until Tuesday education department officials realized their appointee is in England and won't be back for several months.

Embarrassed education officials placed the blame on the labor department which provided the names of the conciliators without checking to see if they were actually available for service.

The two departments got together this morning to check out all the appointments and find a new conciliator to mediate talks between teachers and school boards in the six lower Island school districts.

Education officials indicate they have a person in mind but they won't make the same mistake twice and are keeping mum on the name until it is confirmed.

Salmon Aid Request Near

Water Commissioner Ron Upward expects to be asked to release water into Goldstream River early next week to help salmon reach their spawning grounds.

"I haven't yet been asked by the fisheries department for water," he said. "But I expect this to come towards the end of the month."

He was commenting on complaints that the lack of water in the river is preventing salmon from moving upstream.

A fisheries official said the department will ask for water as soon as there is a sufficient buildup of salmon at the south end of Saanich Inlet, near the mouth of the river.

"There still appears to be few fish waiting to go upstream," he said. "We are watching the situation closely."

However, some fisheries experts and conservationists think water should be released now.

In immediate danger of dying before spawning are the spring salmon, the largest of the species and the first to spawn in the river, Howard English, a member of the International Salmon Commission advisory committee said.

English said springs come in October and "these are the fish which take a beating because of the lack of water in the river."

Springs weigh between 12 and 26 pounds and are a spectacular sight swimming upstream.

Next to move upstream, mostly in November, is the coho, a smaller species of salmon weighing between six and 15 pounds. The chums, a third species are the last to enter the river.

Conservationist Freeman King disagrees with federal fisheries officials who claim there are not enough fish in the bay to warrant asking for water.

"Water should be released immediately," he said. "The fish are waiting in the bay now. How the hell can they come up without water?"

Olympics to Moscow, Lake Placid

VIENNA (Reuter) — Moscow today won the right to stage the 1980 Summer Olympic games, turning back a bid by Los Angeles.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) voted to accept the Soviet bid and to reward the Russians with the honor of staging the world's greatest sports spectacle. Moscow lost a similar bid four years ago.

The day was not a total loss for the U.S., however, as Lake Placid, N.Y., the only bidder, was confirmed as the site of the 1980 Winter Games.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, announced the results after a vote taken at the start of the third day of the IOC annual session.

Moscow and Los Aneles were the defeated candidates four years ago when the IOC awarded the 1976 Summer Games to Montreal.

The 64 members of the governing body of the Olympic movement had maintained their traditional reluctance to anticipate the vote, but Moscow had emerged as the strong favorite before the result of the voting was announced.

Lake Placid, a resort in upper New York state, had been the only remaining applicant for the 1980 Winter Games.

The Soviet Union has been campaigning for the first games ever awarded a communist state almost since it first entered a team in the 1952 Games in Helsinki.

Unlike the persistent Soviet campaign, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and his committee had been active for only one year and many observers said their low-key campaign appeared to reflect their own doubts.

Russia appeared likely to achieve its goal of winning a site in 1970, when the IOC voted on the 1976 location.

Los Angeles and Montreal were the other contenders and Moscow was disappointed when the Canadian city was chosen.

Since then, the Russians have been working hard in Olympic circles, and their sports achievements of the past decade, added to their careful sports diplomacy and the heavy capital building program of track and field facilities, was favorably reported by many visitors.

Some political doubts remained about the selection of Moscow, however, and these were fanned by incidents during the World University Games in Moscow last year.

There are still those who question Soviet promises to permit free entry to all eligible Olympic competitors, media and tourists from the countries not on friendly terms with Russia.

But Moscow has guaranteed to meet all IOC requirements allowing freedom of entry and movement, and has worked hard to correct faults which appeared at the student games.

Who's That on Top? Why, It's Victoria

No, folks, the Western Canada Hockey League standings aren't upside down today; Victoria Cougars really are in first place.

They got there by defeating Winnipeg Clubs 6-4 Tuesday night in Winnipeg, thanks mainly to a four-goal effort by centre Mel Bridgman.

Cougars now have five wins, two ties and a loss on their current 10-game road trip, running their season total to 14, one more than Medicine Hat Tigers.

New Westminster Bruins gave the Cougars an assist Tuesday night by beating the Tigers 2-1. In the only other game, Saskatoon Blades and Calgary Centennials battled to a 4-4 tie.

Cougars have today off, then move to Brandon Thursday to tackle the Wheat Kings, play Lethbridge Broncos in Lethbridge Friday and return home for back-to-back games against Regina Pats Sunday at 7 p.m. and next Tuesday at 8.

Cougars played in Winnipeg without defenceman Gordie Roberts, ordered by WCHL president Ed Chynoweth to stay out of action until his branch-to-branch transfer from the Ontario Hockey Association is received.

Roberts played last season for Detroit Junior Red Wings of the Southern Ontario League, a Tier Two circuit, and Cougar coach Pat Ginnell said he used him after receiving verbal assurances that he would be released.

Calgary Centennials are in the same boat over defenceman Greg Neeld, who lost an eye in an accident last season while with Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Major junior series.

Chynoweth Tuesday quoted OHA president Tubby Schmalz of Walkerton, Ont., that Neeld would be released as soon as a branch-to-branch transfer is approved.

Meanwhile, Ginnell, Chynoweth and Calgary owner-coach Scotty Munro will discuss the problem today in Calgary.

Cougars have never been in first place this far into the season since joining the WCHL three years ago, finishing out of the playoffs every year.

Ginnell vowed he'd have the team playing .500 hockey at the end of the current road trip, but Cougars' performance so far has surpassed even that prediction.

Bridgman, a returnee with Victoria, twice put his team ahead in the first period as Cougars took a 3-2 lead, scored the only goal of the second and banged home what turned out to be the winner while killing a penalty to Rick LaPointe early in the third. Bridgman now has goals in 11 games.

Other Victoria marksmen were Irv Bowles and Jim Gustafson while Greg Warren, Larry Skinner, Gord Blumschein and Guy Lash counted for Winnipeg.

Goaltender Lloyd Saar had a hot night, making 35 stops, including 11 in the second period and 13 in the third.

A crowd of 3,425 in Medicine Hat saw New Westminster get first-period goals by Kelly Secord and Brad Maxwell in its win over the Tigers. In Calgary, Danny Arndt scored with less than three minutes to go to give Saskatoon its tie.

Lions: Please! Not Another Sad Ending

The odyssey of the B.C. Lions continues, but people shouldn't make jokes about them any more. Not this season at any rate. They've suffered tragedy enough.

Because just when it appeared they were on their way to a best-ever season, now the story unfolds that they may miss the playoffs.

It's possible, just as it's possible they could finish in first place. It's been that kind of a hairy season for the Leos and it certainly isn't over yet.

The frustration must be knee-deep in Empire Stadium these days following Saturday's heart-breaking loss to the Saskatchewan Roughriders, a game, by all accounts, they should have won. Because that would have put them in the post-season playoff derby, and put Saskatchewan in a hole. But then Ronnie Lancaster and the venerable George Reed don't bury that easily.

Just ask the Lions. Any Lion of the past 22 years. The Roughriders have been the bane of their existence along with the Edmonton Eskimos. Before this season even the Lions had lost 42 games to the Roughies while winning only 21 and tying four. This year it has been harder to believe. Saturday's defeat marked the third successive time the Riders have come from behind to defeat the Lions. And as the Lions have only six defeats to go with their eight victories it's easy to see what the Saskatchewan record has done to their credibility. And just when everything was becoming credible again, too, and the largest crowd of the season in Empire Stadium as well.

When Bad Was Bad

For the record, coming up to the final two games of the season with Edmonton, the Eskimos hold a 43-21-2 record over the Lions and, at the risk of ruining what otherwise is a splendid week in October in beautiful B.C., has anyone really forgotten how horrendous the Lions' record has been over the years?

Would you believe that right now the Lions have won only 115 games, tied 13 and lost 206 . . . have finished out of the playoffs 15 times, been last six times; in one season, the first, scored only 100 points, the all-time CFL low . . .

Still, that's what makes history, and bumping into Annis Stukus one day last month revived memories of that first season of 1954.

Annis was still talking, and still talking about "our team," meaning the present B.C. Lions. But he also recalled that initial season. He doubled as coach and place-kicker and his team of misfits won one game and lost 15. Next year, Suke upped the win total to five, but got fired for his trouble and the team's improvement.

There followed, in order, Clem Crowe, who won six and four, and was fired; Wayne Robinson, nine and five in his first two seasons. Then when the record reached zero and eight the next year, out he went to be followed by Dave Skrien.

Skrien won seven in 1962, hit the jackpot with 12 and the Western Football Conference title in '63, 11 and the Grey Cup in '64, then hit the skids in '65. The Lions won six, but dropped to fourth, were dead last in '66, and Jim Champion came on the scene as head coach halfway through '67.

In First . . . Or Fourth

He couldn't hack it, especially the following season. He won only four and was without a job by mid-season '68 when Jackie Parker was waved in. Parker was a winner even if the Lions weren't, finishing fourth in '70. He was upgraded to general manager, Denny Veitch getting the heave-ho.

Now enter Eagle Keys, once the toast of Saskatchewan. In the intervening years, with the Lions last season getting into the playoffs for the first time in years, it's been a mediocre six, five and five for Keys in the win column. That is until this year when everything seemed to jell. And until those last two games with Saskatchewan.

Then thud! Boom! Saskatchewan! Again! And just who knocked out the Leos in yast year's semi? Any doubt? The Roughriders, that's who, and the Lions had the lead, 10-0 then too. An embarrassing windup.

But now it's now no joke. It's life or death for the Lions, who can finish anywhere from first to fourth. And who knows, with Don Moorhead hurting and bad Bill Baker out of the lineup, maybe they'll blow it. But then hopefully they won't.

Because this time there is a difference. They have proven they belong. So to hell with tradition, eh Stuke? They've lived with that long enough. Like 22 years.

Just as long as they don't have to play Saskatchewan again. Wouldn't that tear it though?

North Stars Stop Canucks Wings Lead as Kings Lose

VANCOUVER (CP) — Outstanding net minding by Cesare Maniago and two goals by Henry Boucha lifted Minnesota North Stars to a 3-2 National Hockey League victory over the fired-up Vancouver Canucks before a capacity crowd of 15,570 at the Pacific Coliseum Tuesday night.

Maniago kicked out 33 shots — 16 in the final period — and Boucha picked up his first two goals of the season as Minnesota halted Vancouver's undefeated string at four games.

Dennis Hextall added what proved to be the winning goal for the North Stars. Paulin Bordeleau and John Gould replied for Vancouver who remained in first place in division three, two points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks.

The North Stars and Canucks opened the first period with a display of hard checking and hard hitting and although Vancouver netminder Gary Smith blocked 13 shots compared with only four by Maniago there were few scoring chances by either club.

Following the scoreless first period, Vancouver dominated play in the second period but Maniago rose to the occasion.

Boucha gave Minnesota a 1-0 lead at 1:10 of the third period when he picked up a rebound that came off the boards and rammed in a low shot to beat Smith on the glove side.

Vancouver bounced back when Bordeleau scored his third goal of the season after he picked up a pass from centre Doris Oddlefson, drew out Maniago and slipped a shot into the empty net.

Boucha put the North Stars ahead 2-1 at 9:45 when he deflected Doug Hicks' shot from the point to catch Smith moving in the opposition direction.

Hexiall seemed to put the game out of reach of Vancouver when he blasted a drive past Smith at 17:11 to give the Stars a 3-1 lead but Vancouver roared back with Gould firing a point-blank shot past Maniago with 1:48 remaining.

Coach Alex Delvecchio said at the start of the National Hockey League season that he was aiming his Detroit Red Wings for first place in their division.

So far, so good. Led by rookie Bill Lochead's two goals, the Wings blanked Washington Capitals 3-0 Tuesday night and took over first place in the NHL's second division over Los Angeles Kings who suffered their first loss, dropping a 4-2 decision to Philadelphia Flyers.

In other games Tuesday, New York Islanders edged Atlanta Flames 2-1 and Minnesota North Stars beat Vancouver Canucks 3-2.

Delvecchio, after making his pre-season prediction, was asked if he wasn't being overconfident, especially since the Wings haven't reached the playoffs in four years.

"It could be, but let's face it, we're in here to win and I don't want to put in their minds we're just here for the playoffs," the Detroit coach had said. "We're shooting for the top spot all the way."

At least some of the Wings appear to have taken their coach seriously, including Lochead, the club's first-round draft choice this year.

Lochead, 20, a left winger who scored 57 goals for Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A circuit last season, collected his fourth and fifth goals of the NHL season.

Goalie Jim Rutherford stopped 25 shots for his first shutout of the season.

The Wings now have 10 points from six games, one point ahead of Los Angeles.

Ironically, the Kings' first loss came on home ice after they had opened the season with a six-game road trip, earning three wins and three ties.

At Uniondale, N.Y., star defender Denis Potvin set up Bob Bourne with a breakaway pass and the rookie beat goalie Phil Myre of Atlanta for the Islanders' winning goal with just 43 seconds remaining in the game.

The win kept the Islanders in a tie with Philadelphia for the first division lead.

FOREMAN FACING $100-MILLION SUIT

NEW YORK (AP) — K.O. Inc. filed a $100-million lawsuit Tuesday against heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman over his bout with Muhammad Ali in Zaire next Tuesday.

The Nevada corporation alleged that the boxer breached a contract that gave K.O. Inc. exclusive promotion rights for fights and for television, radio and film presentations of the fights.

K.O.'s suit, filed in United States District Court in Manhattan, asked for $100 million in damages and requested the court to enjoin further contract violations.

The plaintiffs claimed that earlier this year Foreman was persuaded to violate a 1971 contract with K.O. Inc. by agreeing to a promotional deal with others for the scheduled fight in Africa.

Shocked Rookie Blows 76er Fuse

By The Associated Press

Rookie John Drew says he's shocked to be in professional basketball ranks, which is exactly the way he's making some other people feel.

Drew poured in 41 points to lead Atlanta Hawks to a 125-92 rout of Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday night. He now is averaging 32.3 points a game after three National Basketball Association outings.

"I'm still shocked to be up here," said Drew. "I've read about people like Tom Van Arsdale and Billy Cunningham, and now I'm playing against them. I've been nervous all day."

Atlanta jumped out to a 14-2 lead over Houston and never looked back. Dwight Jones added 24 points and Lou Hudson 23 for the Hawks. Clyde Lee led Atlanta rebounders with 21 while Drew, who is barely 20 years old, had 18.

Elsewhere in the NBA, New York Knicks beat Houston Rockets 110-100, Buffalo Braves defeated New Orleans Jazz 134-118, Milwaukee Bucks nipped Chicago Bulls 92-90, Washington Bullets got past Kansas City-Omaha Kings 123-121 and Portland Trail Blazers edged Golden State Warriors 107-106.

In the American Basketball Association, San Diego Q's edged Memphis Sounds 109-106 and the Spirits of St. Louis beat Virginia Squires 118-112.

Milwaukee Bucks erased a four-point deficit in the final 38 seconds to beat the Bulls. Bob Dandridge scored a pair of baskets to tie the score, then Lucius Allen stole the ball and sank a pair of free throws with two seconds left for the victory.

Ducks on the Diamond

UNION, Ky. (AP) — It's baseball season in Union, where Larry Luebbers is umpire, groundskeeper and, often, the only fan at his own major league ballpark.

Luebbers, 33, is the proud owner of all that is left of Crosley Field, until 1970 the home of the Cincinnati Reds.

"All I really ever wanted to do was walk on the field," said Luebbers. "Then when they auctioned off parts of the stadium, I thought I'd pick up a few seats and one thing kept leading to another."

Four years and $29,000 later, Luebbers has a barn full of seats and his ducks now peck at the pitching rubber.

"I didn't think it was right that they should just rip the stadium up and cart it away," said Luebbers.

As you enter Union you can see Luebbers' stadium up on the hill. The fences, the foul poles and the dugouts are all in place, but there are no grandstands."

Luebbers has only 400 seats, but that's enough.

"There are only 250 people in Union," grinned Luebbers.

Shady Character Skips Out on Dahlia

TORONTO (CP) — Dahlia, a four-year-old filly, apparently scares her opponents.

Because of her presence in Sunday's $125,000-added Canadian International Championship at Woodbine race track, two of the top grass runners in North America will be absent.

Group Plan won the Hawthorne Gold Cup last Saturday in Chicago, but trainer Allan Jerkens has told the Ontario Jockey Club that his horse will not make it to Toronto.

"He told me he didn't want any part of Dahlia," said Bruce Walker, the club's director of publicity.

John Russell, trainer of Shady Character, also called from the United States with the same news.

"Russell phoned to tell me he had reconsidered the situation and decided Dahlia was just too tough," Walker said.

The race, for three-year-olds and up, will be held on the Marshall turf course and cover 1 5-8 miles. Last year's winner was Secretariat, his last race before the 1973 Triple Crown winner was retired to stud.

The race is expected to attract at least 10 horses, including Chilean-bred Protectora which took an easy victory last Sunday in the $37,135 Nettie Stakes at Woodbine.

Others expected are Meautry, from France, Big Spruce and London Company, both from the U.S., and Carney's Point, Fleet Zephyr, Good Port and Sam's Own, all representing Canadian interests.

Derby winner owned by Toronto's E.P. Taylor, may not race. Snow Knight has lost its last two races at Woodbine.

Hurry Harriet, owned by Dr. Malcolm Thorpe of Sarnia, Ont., is out of it because she reinjured a tendon in her left leg during a race last weekend in Ireland.

Forest Service Magazine Has Unbiased Approach

Unlike what some hard-core environmentalists might expect from a publication put out by the B.C. Forest Service, the quarterly ForesTalk is refreshingly unbiased in its approach to reporting.

For instance, take one of a series of three articles in the current issue dealing with the controversial subject of slash burning.

"The complex variety of British Columbia's forest resource defies any simple yes-no decision on the question of slash burning," writes J. P. "Hamish" Kimmins, an ecologist and associate professor in the faculty of forestry at UBC.

"The effects of slash burning on soils, on regrowth of the forest, on water and fish, and on wildlife has received a lot of attention and yet our knowledge of the long-term consequences of slash burning on any specific area is still incomplete.

"Slash burning generally aggravates the undesirable effects that logging can have on streams. Siltation, excessive summer heating of streams, and excessive increases in concentrations of dissolved chemicals often have deleterious consequences for fish and the quality of water."

Kimmins also points out that slash burning, which is normally done to reduce the fire hazard in logged-over areas and thus protect adjacent timber, often has the opposite effect of damaging nearby treed areas when a slash fire escapes.

He adds that some of the types of forest now being slash burned should never be subjected to this type of treatment.

"The evidence, albeit incomplete, indicates that the benefits of slash burning on such sites are outweighed by the disadvantages. There are other types of forest, however, for which slash burning can be very beneficial to the forest, while at the same time doing little or no environmental damage. There are yet other types of forest in which slash burning can either be good or bad, depending on when and how it is done."

Kimmins continues:-

"I believe that slash burning should remain as an option available to foresters as a means to solving certain types of problem conditions.

"However, I feel that decisions on slash burning must be made in a far more ecologically rational manner than they have in the past; that the decision must be based on an understanding of the character of the land and the way in which it will respond to slash burning."

He further states it is the responsibility of the Forest Service to "ensure that appropriate knoweldge is obtained through research" on alternative methods of slash disposal and exact effects of slash burning under various conditions.

In conjunction with Kimmin's views, ForesTalk presents the opinions of a forest service protection division officer and a Council of Forest Industries spokesman.

Elsewhere in the same issue, there is an outstanding article by Adam Szczawinski on mushrooms, a report on an international effort to save the woodland cariboo and its habitat in the Selkirk Mountains, a story on clearing operations behind Mica Dam and an interesting discussion on the use of detonating cord to help create fireguards while fighting fires.

Only seven issues old, ForesTalk now has an estimated readership of 150,000 — and that's on the conservative side.

Gerry Graham, the editor, said that 36,000 issues are mailed out to various parts of B.C., Canada and the United States. There are also a few readers in such diverse spots as South America, Portugal and England.

Most of the readership stems from the copies distributed to libraries, schools, hospitals, doctors, dentists and various other groups and institutes.

However, about 15,000 copies are now going out to members of the general public. And that number is growing.

After all, the photographs alone make this magazine worthwhile and the price is right: free.

Ruling Boosts Esquimalt

An official ruling plus two victories Tuesday gave Esquimalt three points and second place in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Volleyball League.

Esquimalt defeated Claremont 16-14, 15-3 and downed Dunsmuir 15-9, 15-11 in matches at the latter school Tuesday. The extra point was gained through a decision on a game involving Belmont earlier this season.

Belmont was found guilty of using an ineligible player and forfeited the match.

Dunsmuir defeated Oak Bay 15-9, 15-11 in the other match.

At Reynolds, Victoria downed the host club 15-7, 15-12; Belmont beat their hosts 15-11, 13-15, 16-4 and Mt. Douglas topped Belmont, 15-11, 15-4.

Olympic Hockey Wants Us

VIENNA (CP) — The organizers of the 1976 Winter Olympics in Innsbruck hope to have a Canadian hockey team competing in the Games.

"We are negotiating with the International Ice Hockey Federation and the Canadian Olympic Association," said Dr. Karl Heinz Klee, general-secretary of the Innsbruck Organizing Committee.

"We had a successful Canadian team at our Games in 1964 and we would like to have them with us in 1976.

"There is a possibility they will be with us. It looks quite good."

Canada withdrew from international hockey competition before the 1970 World hockey championships which were scheduled to be played in Winnipeg and Montreal.

Canada had hoped to use nine professionals in the championships and had made arrangements to do so with the IHHF, but the IHHF later ruled the pros could not be used.

Since then, there have been two eight-game series between Canadian professionals and the Soviet Union's national team.

Custodian Strike Possible But Basketball Will Go On

SCHOLASTIC SCENE

By Jim Crerar

The work-to-rule campaign by school custodians in Victoria is over, at least for the time being, but the possibility of a full scale strike in January remains.

If there is a strike, as was the case two years ago, sports programs in city schools will be curtailed. Coaches are investigating alternate plans.

Among them is Wayne Erickson, chairman of the coaches' association for senior boys' high school basketball.

"If there's a strike, we'll have to work out some sort of schedule to determine our representatives in the Island finals," he pointed out.

Which means there will be a high school basketball season even if the strike takes pace, but it's going to take some fancy juggling.

Erickson, coach of Reynolds Roadrunners, would get together with the other nine coaches in the league to redraft the schedule. Meanwhile, alternate sites would have to be found for games.

"We've attempted to find extra facilities at the University of Victoria," Erickson said, "possibly getting some time in the old gym once the new one is completed in January. But they didn't look favorably on the idea at UVic."

If worst comes to worst, UVic athletic director Mike Elcock undoubtedly will do what he can to accommodate the high schools, but it won't be easy. Facilities at the university already are overtaxed and even after the $2.4 million complex is open, the old gym will be used for intramural sports and practices.

There are other alternatives, however.

"We would look to outlying schools as possible locations for games," Erickson said. These would include Dunsmuir, Belmont, Parkland and Claremont, which would be unaffected by a strike. All four schools are in the league but lie outside the school district 61 boundary.

"Two years ago, the janitors struck the second or third week in January," Erickson related. "The girls got time for their basketball at Henderson Park Pavilion." Presumably, they might play there again.

Lower Island high school coaches, meanwhile, have a more immediate problem. With the addition of Parkland Panthers and Dunsmuir Demons, the Greater Victoria League has increased to 10 schools. The understanding among the coaches is that they should be allowed five entries in the Island playoffs next March 6-8 instead of four, as in the past.

But Upper Island schools, understandably, aren't receptive to the idea of reducing their representation from four to three in the eight-team tournament.

Erickson hopes to line up a strong turnout of Greater Victoria coaches at a meeting in Nanaimo Oct. 29th to deal with the matter.

There are six returning coaches in the Greater Victoria League this year — Erickson at Reynolds, Don Horwood with Oak Bay Bays, Dale Bate with Mt. Doug Rams, Ash Valdal with Vic High Totems, Doug Latta with Claremont Spartans and Bill Spotswood with Belmont-Fisher Braves.

Skip Standish replaces Vic Derman with Esquimalt Dockers, Rich Mark has taken over from Sig Kuhn at Spectrum, Joe Mulligan replaces Corky Jossul at Parkland and Jim Kilpatrick is the coach at Dunsmuir.

Horwood, prepping the Bays for a run at a third straight B.C. high school crown this season, opens the campaign Friday with a pair of games marking the 10th anniversary of Oak Bay's first provincial championship.

Bay's first B.C. title came in 1965 and grads of that team will play the 1968 provincial champions at 7 p.m. Both squads were coached by Gary Taylor, now masterminding the UVic Vikings.

The second game at 8:30 p.m. pits a combined team of 1973 and '74 provincial champs, both coached by Horwood, against this year's Bays.

Jam-Up Forces Playoff

Claremont's victory coupled with losses by Dunsmuir and St. Margaret's on the final day of the schedule Tuesday to force a three-way playoff for sixth place in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Field Hockey League.

The top six teams in the league advance to the two-day Vancouver Island championship tournament starting Friday at Lansdowne Junior High.

St. Margaret's and Dunsmuir meet today to decide who faces Claremont on Thursday for the final berth.

Other teams gaining the Island playoff are Oak Bay, Mt. Douglas, Norfolk House, Victoria and Spectrum.

Volleyball Win Posted By Canada

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The defending champion Soviet Union defeated South Korea in the World Volleyball championships Tuesday.

The Soviet women, playing the final round of the championships in Guadalajara, won 16-14, 23-21, 15-13. The second set lasted nearly one hour.

In other women's games in Guadalajara, Japan needed just over an hour to defeat East Germany, 15-2, 15-8, 15-10, and Romania turned back Hungary 15-13, 15-13, 15-12.

Men's action here saw Canada defeat Panama 15-1, 15-4, 12-15, 15-10 and Italy outclass the Dominican Republic 13-15, 15-4, 15-7, 15-4. Venezuela found little opposition in Puerto Rico and coasted to a 15-4, 15-4, 15-6 victory in 45 minutes.

The Mexican men's team lost to Bulgaria 16-14, 15-4, 15-8. In other action, Cuba defeated Holland, 15-9, 15-17, 15-2, 15-7 and Brazil downed Belgium 15-3, 15-11, 15-6 also in men's action.

Poland, one of the favorites to take the men's title from East Germany, needed five sets to defeat the Soviet Union, 16-14, 9-15, 15-6, 12-15, 15-7, in a game played here.

In Puebla, Mexico, all in the women's category, Brazil blasted the Philippines 15-0, 15-3, 15-3; Bulgaria topped Holland 15-9, 15-4, 15-5 and China went all out to beat Czechoslovakia 15-12, 15-13, 9-15, 12-15, 15-7.

Women's play in Monterrey saw Mexico defeat the United States in four sets; Cuba turn back Peru in three sets and Poland follow suit against Canada.

Good news from Autoplan:

Victoria* car insurance rates stay the lowest in B.C.

In these days of sky-rocketing prices, anything that costs the same as last year is a real bargain and that is certainly true of Victoria Autoplan rates.

In spite of soaring accident claim costs and increasing insurance premiums elsewhere in North America, Autoplan rates in Victoria will stay at their present low levels through 1975. Some Victoria owners of commercial and recreational vehicles will even pay less.

Autoplan car insurance rates will continue to be lower in Victoria than in other parts of B.C. even after the new Territorial Equalization Discounts are applied.

There will be a twenty per cent discount on insurance premiums for heavy trucks, commercial and recreational vehicles in Victoria as well as in other B.C. areas.

But Autoplan rates cannot stay at their present low levels if accident claims continue to increase. So drive safely and protect your pocketbook as well as your life.

Boxers Salvage Tie On Last-Play Tally

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Youth and hustle pulled a fast one over experience Tuesday night but it didn't last.

Bustling University of Victoria Vikings dashed all over the field at Royal Atheletic Park, undaunted by a 2-0 lead built up by the slicker-passing London Boxing Club.

And the bustling paid off. By half-time the Vikings had cut the margin to 2-1 on a goal by speedy centre-forward Tim Page and, with 10 minutes left in the game, Mark Robb fired the ball past a maze of legs for the equalizer.

Mike Sails shocked the Boxers when he sent the Vikings ahead 3-2 only five minutes from time when his 40-yard indirect free kick dipped suddenly and fooled goalkeeper Kjeld Brodsgaard.

But then, just as the university boys were getting ready to celebrate, striker George Pakos shipped the ball past UVic's 'keeper Mike Armstrong during a goal mouth scramble to make it 3-3 with a goal on the last play of the game.

It was the highest number of goals scored in a game this season against Brodsgaard, who had had four shutouts in five starts.

The victory left the Vikings at the top of the Vancouver Island Soccer League's Premier Division, one point clear of the Boxers, who have a game in hand.

Vikings lacked the finish of their opponents in the first half and can thank left-back Doug Purich they weren't any more than 2-0 down in the first half.

With a brilliant, if sometimes unorthodox, display, the stocky defender cleared time after time, with his knee, his side, even his back . . . and sometimes his boots. But he clearted, certainly, and his contribution was a vital one. At one stage, when the Boxers really had the pressure on, Purich dashed back and saved right on the goal line three times after Armstrong had been beaten.

Spurred by Page's goal, scored less than a minute from the interval, and by the half-time words of coach Brian Hughes, the Vikings settled down more in the second half and the Boxers, for the first time this season, found what it was like to really feel pressure themselves.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Powerful middle game of 383 and strong finish carried Jake Jacob (above) to men's five-pin honors in third week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Jake earned award that qualifies him for Times-sponsored Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs by spilling pins for 278-383-321—982 series in Monday Niters League at Town and Country Lanes.

Toros Overtalented

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Toros capped a four-game unbeaten streak with an 11-2 win over Minnesota Fighting Saints but Toros coach Billy Harris confessed he still has a problem.

The Toros lead the World Hockey Association Canadian Division with eight points out of their first four games and Harris now is worrying about his surplus of players.

"I've got four players sitting in the stands who have a potential of 80 goals and a third goaltender with lot of experience," said Harris, "but within the next week I'll have to cut two or three of them."

Sitting in the stands with 8,204 spectators Tuesday night were Guy Trottier, Bob Leduc and Tom Martin, all 20-goal scorers last year, and promising rookie Lou Nistico. Also on standby was veteran goalie Les Binkley.

But except for Binkley, none of the extra men saw much hope of an opening on the high-powered Toros squad.

BILLY HARRIS
. . . overstocked

In other WHA games Tuesday, Quebec Nordiques beat the league champcon Houston Aeros 7-2 and San Diego Mariners defeated Cleveland Crusaders 5-2.

The Toros may need Binkley for a few days after their No. 1 goalie, Gilles Gratton was knocked out in the first period by a shot that caught him on the neck late in the first period.

Backup goalie Jim Shaw took over for Gratton but by that time the Toros had a 4-0 lead.

Right winger Tom Simpson scored four goals and Pat Hickey added three to lead the Toronto attack which included 44 shots on goal.

The Saints had John Garrett in goal in place of regular Mike Curran who is sitting out a suspension.

At Quebec, Pierre Guite scored twice and added an assist to lead the Nordiques to their second win in as many games before a crowd of 9,220.

Quebec moved into a second place tie with Winnepeg Jets in the Canadian Division while the Aeros' loss left them tied for third in the Western Division.

Andre Lacroix scored two goals and helped set up two others to lead San Diego before a home crowd of 3,258.

TORONTO (11) — Tom Simpson 4, Pat Hickey 3, Wayne Dillon, Vaclav Nedomansky, Frank Mahovlich, Paul Henderson. MINNESOTA (2) — Steve Antonovich, Murray Heatley. Attendance: 8204.

QUEBEC (7) — Pierre Guite 2, Reiean Houle, Alain Beaule, Alain Caron, Real Cloutier, Michel Parizeau. HOUSTON (2) — Marty Howe, Len Lunde. Attendance: 9220.

SAN DIEGO (5) — Andre Lacroix 2, Rick Santes, Kevin Morrison, Gene Peacosh. CLEVELAND (2) — Ron Buchanan, 2.

Pleasing Rugby Target for B.C.

Entertainment is No. 1 on the priority list for the British Columbia side in its international exhibition rugby match with Tonga tonight at 7 at Royal Athletic Park.

The weary Tongans arrived in Victoria last night after a delayed flight from Britain, following a nine-game tour there, and a ferry crossing to the Island.

Assistant coach Tillman Briggs of James Bay Athletic Association said later at a reception for the Tongans that head coach Donn Spence of Vancouver had confirmed B.C. would not play it tight just to get a win.

Like the Fijians, who played here last season, the carefree Tongans enjoy throwing the ball about a lot in the back line but are not too experienced in the finer points of forward play.

The Tongans lost eight of the nine games in Britain and Briggs pointed out that the teams that beat the tourists did so by playing it tight and dominating things up front, thus destroying the Tongans' backfield iniative.

"But Spence says we won't do that — our main concern is to play entertaining rugby and give the fans their money's worth," said Briggs.

Eight Vancouver Island players are included in the starting XV for B.C.

Italian Team Leads Women's World Golf

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic (AP) — Cynthia Hill, the United States national champion, had the best individual score with a 76 in the opening round of the women's world amateur golf championship Tuesday, but Italy led the favored United States and three other teams by one stroke.

Frederica Dassu's 78 and Marina Ciaffi Ragher's 81 gave Italy a 159 total, 11 over par on the 6,212-yard Cajuiles course which was soaked by rain and buffetted by high winds.

France, Great Britain and Ireland shared the No. 2 spot with the United States. South Africa was third with 162 and Switzerland and Canada followed at 164.

The Spanish team, considered the strongest challenger to the defending United States trio shared a 165 total with The Netherlands.

The only two Canadian individual scores available were those of Vancouver's Marilyn Palmer and Betty Cole of Edmonton.

Miss Palmer had nines of 39-42 for an 81 total while Mrs. Cole was 39-44—83.

Hornets Preparing For Island Ttitle Bid

Saanich Hornets appear to be charging toward maximium efficiency as they prepare for the Vancouver Island junior bantam football final on Nov. 3.

Winners of the lower-Island crown, Hornets are playing exhibiton contests while waiting to meet Nanaimo Trojans for the Island title, making their next exhibiton appearance Saturday on the home field of North Vancouver Colts.

Only one week after suffering their worst-ever defeat — a 56-0 thumping dished out in Victoria by Langley Lords — Hornets were greatly improved as they rebounded at Langley last weekend and crushed the Lords 28-7.

They were also sharp last Saturday night in a preview of the Island final as they outscored Nanaimo 6-0 in a 10-minute "Minor Football Night" contest at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Stoic Walt Alston Manager of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Alston of Los Angeles Dodgers was named The Associated Press' National League Manager of the Year today.

The stoic Alston, who guided the Dodgers to the National League pennant this season for the seventh time in his 21-year big league baseball career, won in a rout.

Alston outscored Danny Murtaugh, manager of the National League East champion Pittsburgh Pirates, 290 votes to 87. Voting by sports writers and broadcasters took place prior to the league's playoffs.

Red Schoendienst, whose St. Louis Cardinals battled Pittsburgh down to the end for the East title, finished third in the balloting with 26 votes.

Finishing behind the top three were, Danny Ozark of Philadelphia Phillies with six votes; Atlanta's Clyde King with three and Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson with two.

Known as a superb handler of men, Alston's tempered personality gave the Dodgers quiet confidence throughout the tough National League West battle with Cincinnati Reds.

Alston was born in Hamilton, Ohio, 62 years ago and once worked as a high school basketball coach and science teacher. He entered the Dodger organization with their Trenton, N.J., team and also managed at Montreal before being named the Dodger field boss for the 1954 season.

Alston signed a one-year contract that season, and uniquely has kept up the pattern throughout his glamorous career.

"One-year contracts are a matter of pride with me," Alston says. "I wouldn't want to work anywhere where I wasn't wanted."

Alston's accomplishment stamps him as one of the most successful managers of all time. Only two men have managed one team longer than Alston has. Connie Mack managed 50 years with Philadelphia Athletics and John McGraw had 31 years with New York Giants.

Alston has won four world championships, a feat surpassed in the game by only three other managers.

Streak Extended

League-leading Victoria stretched an unbeaten streak to five games by tripping winless Fuller Lake Flyers 5-2 at Memorial Arena and Esquimalt moved into second place with a 7-2 decision over Saanich at Pearkes Arena in South Island Junior "B" Hockey League games Tuesday night.

Dave Pettinger set the pace for Victoria with two goals while singles were added by Larry Hansen, Larry Donaldson, and Steve Leatham. Terry Ellison, a midget-aged player, scored both goals for Flyers.

John Entzminger popped in three goals to lead the way for Esquimalt while Ross McKinstry, Gary Becktold, Dale Robertson and Gordie Brooks fired singles.

Yankees Deal for Bonds

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees announced Tuesday the trade of outfielder Bobby Murcer to San Francisco Giants for outfielder Bobby Bonds.

The announcement was made by Gabe Paul, president of the American League Yankees.

The deal was made on the first day of the inter-league trading period and was believed to be the first of this magnitude on an inter-league basis.

Both players are 28 years old, and both were considered to have off-seasons in 1974. Bonds is one of the premier base-stealers in baseball. He has stolen 263 bases in 325 attempts, a percentage of .809. He is one of the few players in baseball history to steal 30 bases and hit 30 home runs in the same season. He accomplished that feat twice.

Murcer hit 140 career-homers for the Yankees, 17th on the club's all-time list. He has been a Yankee regular since 1969, first as a third baseman, later as a centrefielder and this year as a right fielder.

Bonds came to the Giants midway through the 1968 season and has been a regular with the National League club ever since. His best year was 1970 when he batted .302.

Bonds batted .256 this year with 41 stolen bases and 21 homers. That was a slip from .283 in 1973, when he hit 39 homers and stole 43 bases.

Murcer's best season was 1971 when he hit .331 with 25 homers and 94 RBI. He batted .274 in 1974, a drop of 30 points from his 1973 average, and managed only 10 homers after hitting 22 the year before.

Bonds was named the most valuable player in the 1973 all-star game and was proclaimed the "best player in baseball" at that time by manager Sparky Anderson of Cincinnati Reds, who piloted the National League stars that season.

Bonds hit a grand slam home run in his first major league game and has 186 homers for the Giants, sixth on the club's all-time list.

He set a major league record with 11 homers leading off games during the 1973 season.

Olympic Flame to Reach Montreal by Satellite Relay

VIENNA (CP) — Peter Luff worked three months in secrecy last year on a project for the 1976 Summer Olympic games in Montreal.

The project, part of a report submitted by the Montreal organizing committee to the 75th session of the International Olympic Committee, was unveiled Tuesday with IOC approval.

Luff is the man behind a revolutionary plan to relay the Olympic flame to Canada via satellite from Greece for the Games in what Luff described as a "simple process."

"First of all, there is no way that any Canadian airline is going to transport an open flame," Luff said. "Rather than have the flame go out five or six times like it usually does, we want to make its transportation quick and clean."

The lighting of the flame ceremony will begin July 9, 1976, at Mount Olympus. The reflection of the rays of the sun, carried by a parabolic mirror, will light the flame in an urn placed before the temple of Hera.

A runner will light a torch from the urn and it will be carried to Athens where the ceremony of the passing of the flame will be held at Panathenian Stadium.

"The runner will then place the flame against a sensor," Luff explained. "The sensor starts a coded signal to Ottawa via satellite.

"When the signal is received, it will touch off a laser beam which will light an urn in Ottawa."

By using different wave lengths of the electromagnetic spectrum, the electrical impulses can be transmitted by a normal telecommunication's channel. A safety mechanism will be set up to eliminate incendiary hazards or accidental extinction of the flame. Immediately after its arrival in Ottawa, the flame will be sent to each Canadian capital and to the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

"This is being done so that everyone in Canada will have a sense of the Games, especially the people in the Far North who are so far away.

"Television audiences all over the world will be able to see the Athens and Ottawa ceremonies simultaneously on a split screen. They will hear the coded signal bleeping across the Atlantic as well."

Canadian athletes will carry the flame 120 miles to Montreal from Ottawa on July 16. The following day, the flame will be carried to Montreal's 70,000-seat Olympic Stadium.

Cutler Bids To Keep His Record

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Cutler isn't going to give up his single-season field goal title without a struggle.

The 28-year-old placekicker with Edmonton Eskimos has booted 12 field goals in his last three Canadian Football League games to give him a total of 33 this season.

CFL statistics released Monday show Cutler with 133 points, best in the Western Football Conference, with two weeks remaining in the schedule.

Cutler, a resident of Victoria and a graduate of Simon Fraser University, set a CFL single-season record of 32 field goals in 1973. However, that record has been broken this year by Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders, and Ian Sunter of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Sunter leads the Eastern Football Conference in scoring with 128 points, two more than Organ.

In rushing, Monroe Eley of British Columbia Lions and Steve Ferrughelli of Montreal Alouettes joined the 1,000-yard club. Eley now has 1,064 yards on 169 carries and Ferrughetti 1,004 yards on 201 carries.

They joined George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders, 1,407, Roy Bell of Edmonton, 1,248, and Lou Harris of B.C., 1,220.

Eley's performance enabled B.C. to become the fourth club to have two players who have gained 1,000 yards in one season. Johnny Bright and Normie Kwong conbined twice for Edmonton in 1957 in 1958; Ron Stewart and Dave Thelan did it for Ottawa in 1960; and Ed Buchanan and Reed accomplished the trick for Saskatchewan in 1964.

WFL Drafts 16 Wheels

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Eight of the 10 operating World Football League teams Tuesday drafted 16 of the 37 players of the defunct Detroit Wheels, including at least six former Canadian Football League players.

Philadelphia Bell claimed quarterback Bubba Wyche, who previously played with the CFL's Saskatchewan Roughriders. However, Wyche signed with Chicago Fire after the Wheels went bankrupt recently and a WFL spokesman said the two clubs would have to negotiate a settlement.

The Hawaiians and the Florida Blazers, the latter having been taken over by the league, were the only teams that didn't pick up a player in the telephone conference draft.

Gary Davidson, WFL president, said the league would pay the salaries of players who were not selected. Detroit had signed no National Football League players for the future.

Shreveport, drafting first in the reverse order of the standings, selected Mike Walker, a defensive end from Tulance who played for B.C. Lions of the CFL. Portland Storm selected Jesse Mims, former Calgary Stampeders running back, and the Hawaiians passed before Philadelphia named Wyche.

The Jacksonville franchise also ceased operations in this first season of the World Football League, but a WFL spokesman said that team's players were not drafted because of the likelihood that new investors would purchase the club and keep it intact for 1975.

Rocky Long, former B.C. defensive half-back, was taken by Chicago after Wyche.

Sam Scarber, one-time running back with Edmonton Eskimos, was selected by California Sun in the second round while Eric Guthrie, quarterback-kicker who played with B.C., was a third-round choice of Philadelphia.

Hadl Dealt for Five Draft Picks

By The Associated Press

It was open season on swapping quarterbacks Tuesday as the National Football League trading deadline passed. John Hadl went to Green Bay Packers, Craig Morton to New York Giants and Norm Snead to San Francisco '49ers.

The Hadl deal was the biggest surprise and the day's most expensive trade. Los Angeles, which benched Hadl in favor of James Harris after the Rams were upset 10 days ago by the Packers, will get five draft choices, including two No. 1 picks, from Green Bay.

Dallas Cowboys yielded Morton to the Giants for a No. 1 draft pick in 1975, provided Morton doesn't jump to the World Football League, and Snead, in turn, was sent from New York to the '49ers for two high draft picks, one in 1975 and the second in 1976.

The other trades Tuesday:

—Defensive tackle Curley Culp and a No. 1 draft choice from Kansas City Chiefs to Houston Oilers for John Matuszak, also a defensive tackle, and a No. 3 pick.

—Cornerback Jim Marsalis from the Chiefs to Denver Broncos in exchange for tackle Tom Drougas and linebacker Tom Graham.

"John Hadl's experience, ability and leadership qualities should be of great value to the team," Dan Devine, the Packer coach and general manager, said of his new quarterback.

Devine, however, said he plans to start Jack Cannon on Sunday when the Packers play Detroit Lions.

The Rams will get Green Bay's No. 1 picks in both 1975 and 1976, plus a second-and third-round pick in 1975 and a second-round selection in 1976. The second-round pick for 1975 actually belongs to Baltimore Colts, but Green Bay acquired it previously.

Morton had actively campaigned for a trade. He refused to practise on Monday, saying he was "tired of being wasted" and didn't "want to sit around doing nothing . . ."

Morton has signed with the WFL for the 1975 season with Houston Texans, who since have shifted to Shreveport, La. The Giants said if Morton goes to the WFL an adjustment would be made in the draft choice to be delivered to Dallas.

Morton, however, said he could void the WFL contract because of the franchise shift. "I have that right in a clause in the contract," he said.

Morton, 31, has been with the Cowboys since 1965. He played college football at the University of California.

He likely will start for the Giants against his former team Sunday at New Haven, Conn.

Snead, 35, has been the Giants' regular quarterback since 1972 when he was acquired from Minnesota in a trade that sent Fran Tarkenton to the Vikings. He is in his 14th NFL season and played for Washington and Philadelphia after college football at Wake Forest.

Hadl, 34, was acquired after the 1972 season by the Rams from San Diego Chargers. He led Los Angeles to a 12-2 record last season and was selected as the Most Valuable Player in the National Conference.

A star at the University of Kansas, he has thrown for more than 29,000 yards in his 13-year pro career, including 229 touchdown passes.

Matuszak also was a disgruntled player who had signed with the WFL. But in his case, the Oilers went to court.

He jumped to the Texans and the Oilers got a temporary injunction to stop him. The WFL team is appealing.

The 6-foot-8, 285-pound Matuszak, from the University of Tampa, was the No. 1 pick in the 1973 NFL draft.

No Big Scorers But Bruins Lead

KELOWNA (CP) — Chilliwack Bruins are at the top of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League Coast Division, despite having their top scorers in only 11th and 15th places in the league points race.

Bruins have eight wins and two losses and lead the division by four points over Bellingham Blazers.

But Chilliwack's top marksman, Tom Zelke, is 11th among BCJHL scorers with seven goals and seven assists while teammate Greg Huth is 15th with four goals, 10 assists.

At the head of the scoring race are three players from Kelowna Buckaroos, who lead the Interior Division with six wins and two losses, three points ahead of Vernon Vikings.

Doug Berry has nine goals and 15 assists for 25 points, Parry Schnarr has a league-leading 12 goals to go with 11 assists for 23 points and Mark Schnarr has 22 points, evenly divided between goals and assists.

Cater to Canadians Or Else . . . Hotel Told

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — The American operators of the Prince of Wales hotel in Waterton Lakes National Park could be taken to court next year if they don't cater to Canadian tourists, says Judd Buchanan, minister of Indian and northern affairs.

He said the business licence of the hotel will be changed next year "to the effect that Canadian business not be subject to American constraints."

Buchanan made the statement in a letter to Bill Perks, dean of environmental studies at the University of Calgary who has been waging a nationalistic battle with the hotel. Dean Perks was angry that prospective Canadian guests had to telephone a central booking office in Montana for reservations at the hotel, 90 miles southwest of Lethbridge.

He also had other complaints about Canadians not being able to squeeze in between bookings of American charter tours.

To ensure the situation does not recur, Buchanan said in his letter, "we will endorse the business licence to be issued to the company next year" provided that Canadian customers have "equal access to the facilities."

He said any violation would provide the government with recourse through the courts which "we do not have now."

He said the government hopes such an eventuality will not arise, "nor do we think it will."

Buchanan said Glacier Inc., which owns the hotel, has assured Ottawa that Canadian visitors are welcome, and it will no longer be necessary for them to telephone the Montana office to obtain a reservation.

Cattle Contaminated?

SASKATOON (CP) — RCMP across the Prairies are investigating alleged violations of animal health laws that could result in an outbreak of brucellosis, an RCMP spokesman said today.

A herd of more than 350 animals was sold by an east-central Alberta farmer through stockyards in Calgary, police said, rather than directly to a packing house for slaughter as required by law.

As a result, known brucellosis reactors were allowed contact with healthy cattle in Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, the Lakehead and possibly Eastern Canada, RCMP said, although built-in safety checks should have stopped movement of the cattle at any of several points.

Energy Not People's

CALGARY (CP) — John Rudolph, president of Bluemount Resources Ltd. of Calgary and president of the Independent Alberta Association, said Tuesday the energy resources of Alberta do not belong to the people of the province.

Rather, they belong to companies which find and develop them under contract with government, he told the Petroleum Accountants Society of Western Canada.

"The people do not deserve anything more than what they are getting under the contract," he said.

Juba Faces Voters

WINNIPEG (CP) — Resident of Winnipeg have an opportunity to sit in judgment on the first three years of one-city government as they go to the polls today to elect a mayor and 40 of 50 city councillors.

Mayor Stephen Juba, the colorful independent local politician who has been the peoples' choice since 1956, is considered a clear favorite to remain the titular head of the city in a contest with four newcomers to local politics.

The city's estimated 352,600 eligible voters will also determine whether the new council remains more or less unchanged from the group that guided the amalgamated city government since its creation Jan. 1, 1972.

Ten councillors have already been elected by acclamation, and 108 candidates are competing for the other 40 seats.

Cable Firms Plead

EDMONTON (CP) — Three Alberta cablevision companies pleaded before the Canadian Radio-Television Commission Tuesday for permission to increase subscriber rates, saying that soaring capital costs have created a "cash bind" in the fledgling industry.

The companies said increased rates were needed to generate capital for expansion.

Rising interest rates, material and labor costs have contributed to a "terrific cash drain" on the industry, cable company officials said.

Speed Limit Stays

CALGARY (CP) — The idea of lowering speed limits on Alberta's roads has been dropped, Highways Minister Clarence Copithorne said Tuesday.

"There isn't a need in Alberta at the present time for cutting back speed limits," he said in a telephone interview from Edmonton.

The minister said the issue has been thoroughly examined both in Edmonton and with other provincial highway ministers at a road safety meeting in Winnipeg during the weekend.

HIGH FLYING OVER YUKON

WHITEHORSE (CP) — CP Air flights in and out of the Yukon will begin serving liquor starting next Sunday.

The Yukon Liquor Control Board approved the service Monday.

At present, passengers on flights over B.C. are served drinks but the service has had to be cut off when the flights cross the B.C.-Yukon border.

Americans in Saigon Fired

SAIGON (UPI) — The United States, citing congressional cuts in military aid, has fired more than three-quarters of the American technicians helping to keep South Vietnam's warplanes in the air.

A U.S. spokesman said today the Pentagon has dismissed 1,272 of the 1,548 American civilians working with Saigon's air force. He said 879 South Vietnamese technicians were also removed from U.S. payrolls.

The spokesman said the decision, taken "reluctantly" because of a 50 per cent cut in military aid to South Vietnam, is expected to save the United States about $19 million next year.

Most of the fired Americans have been working out in the field with air force units, maintaining planes and teaching South Vietnamese airmen how to fix sophisticated aircraft.

Viet Cong officials have frequently accused the American technicians of actually being military advisers posted to South Vietnam in violation of the Jan. 28, 1973, truce agreement.

The Communists have insisted the United States promised to pull out all civilian technicians within a year of the truce accord. U.S. officials have never denied the claim.

The dismissed U.S. and South Vietnamese technicians were paid out of American military aid funds, slashed in congress from a $1.5 billion administration request to $700 million.

"We have cut out these jobs reluctantly," a U.S. spokesman said. "They were made only because funds were unavailable."

Officials said a study is under way to determine how to save more money. They said additional jobs may be eliminated soon.

Care Waiting List Trimmed By Deaths

OTTAWA (CP) — Elderly persons are suffering — some may even have died — because the province refuses to provide adequate chronic health care facilities, says Al Loney, chairman of the regional hospital planning council's continuing care committee.

A list of 380 elderly persons waiting for hospital care at the beginning of the summer was cut to 320 in August because 70 people had died, Loney said in an interview here Tuesday.

"They all may not have died because they received no treatment, but even if some of them did not have much longer to live, they could have been a lot more comfortable if they had had proper treatment," he added.

Loney accused the province of Ontario of stalling on a request for more chronic health care facilities in the Ottawa area although provision of such specialized facilities would be more economical.

Candidates File Papers

Two persons seeking aldermanic seats on local councils, one in the city of Victoria and the other in North Saanich, declared their candidacy Tuesday.

Cornelius Babie, a 37-year-old Victoria car dealer, said he plans to run for one of four city aldermanic seats because he doesn't agree with "a lot of things" in the present city policies.

While he doesn't have a platform as such, Babie said he generally advocates greater emphasis on "cleaning up" the city, and under this heading he would work toward a more extensive underground wiring program.

Babie is the owner of the Cornell Chevrolet dealership on Douglas.

Another newcomer to the political field, Mrs. Bea Bond filed nomination papers for her election bid in North Saanich, where three vacant seats on council will be contested.

Bond said she is concerned with parks and recreation facilities in the district, as well as "the construction of the acute-care hospital so badly needed in the north end of the peninsula."

Secretary to the Saanich school board for several years, Bond was also secretary of the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce for three years and served on both Sidney and North Saanich Centennial committees.

Jack Bradbury, 45, of 1280 Walnut, is the only candidate so far to file nomination papers to run for a seat on Greater Victoria school board.

Six seats on the nine-member board will be contested this year, five for a two-year term and one for a one-year term to fill the seat left vacant by the death of trustee Harry Graham in August.

Bradbury, married and father of four, is a technician with a federal environment department research team.

He is on the executive of the George Jay school parents' association, and the Fernwood Community Association, and is a spokesman for parents of Victoria High school band members.

Williams' 'Flip-Flop' Accused

Resources Minister Bob Williams is "the greatest flip-flop artist the province has ever seen," according to opposition leader Bill Bennett.

The minister has called for legislation to provide better chip mills for interior sawmills, said Bennett, when the government's own CanCel operation is paying the lowest price for chips in B.C.

Bennett told a Kinsmen meeting in Victoria Tuesday the minister is being "hypocritical and phoney" in telling interior forestry towns he is in favor of better chips prices.

Williams told groups in Thrums and Burns Lake Monday that one of the reasons for the poor lumber economy was that independent mills are being exploited by pulp companies which pay low chip prices.

The opposition leader said action on the problem should have been taken months ago before the present "crisis point" was reached and he said the government did not act because low chip prices mean high profits for CanCel.

Victim's Evidence Convicts

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 23-year-old man could be sentenced to up to 25 years in prison under a new law which permits conviction on rape in New York state solely on the testimony of the victim.

The defendant, Peter Williams, was convicted on charges of raping a 26-year-old New York City woman last April 19, less than a month after the new law took effect.

Police said a man accosted the victim as she got off a bus and forced her at knifepoint to accompany him under a bridge, where he assaulted her.

Prosecutors said the man told her his first name and where he worked. Police arrested Williams a short time later.

Williams could serve up to 25 years in prison when he is sentenced Nov. 25.

CFB Women Opt For Peacekeeping

Several women from Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, have volunteered for service in the Middle East, where Canada intends to add about 50 women to the Canadian contingent with the United Nations Emergency Force.

The armed forces announced in Ottawa today that the women will join the Canadian contingent early next year, the first time in years of peacekeeping that women will make up any significant part of such Canadian operations.

The forces said that volunteers have been requested and a spokesman at CFB Esquimalt said "several girls" applied in response to a survey.

If accepted they would serve as teletype operators, photo technicians, medical assistants, administrative clerks and supply technicians, the same jobs they have here, he said.

Canadian troops are mainly playing a support role in the Middle East and as such most of the personnel are tradesmen. The women will serve for six months in the Middle East, just as the 1,030 personnel now there are doing. After the initial experience, women will be assigned to UNEF duties routinely, without the calling for volunteers.

The forces have declared themselves as believing in equal opportunity for women in all areas except combat, isolated postings and sea duty.

There now are about 2,500 armed forces women and the eventual target is 8,000 out of a total of about 80,000 active personnel.

Goldstream Grant Set

The Amalgamated Conservation Society will receive $1,600 from the province for improvement of the stream habitat at Goldstream Park.

Part of the grant, awarded from the public conservation assistance fund, will also go toward production and feeding of fry in the stream.

The government has distributed $24,080 to conservation groups under the new fund designed to assist clubs in their conservation activities, providing the clubs also contribute labor, material and some of their own money to the projects.

CHIEFS MUM ON MAYOR

Oak Bay firefighters today refused comment on an earlier report indicating their displeasure with Mayor Brian Smith over his remarks to council Monday.

Smith accused firemen of "weasling out" of their contract commitment by asking the Labor Relations Board to reinstate four assistant chiefs that had been considered exempt while their wages were on par with Victoria assistant chiefs.

This year after wage negotiations were settled, their scale dropped and Oak Bay firefighters sought to reclaim the assistant chiefs in order to protect their wage level.

At present the assistant chiefs have no bargaining power and are not members of Local 1956 International Association of Firefighters.

Nanaimo Wharf Plan Unveiled

NANAIMO — Plans for development of the former CP wharf on Nanaimo's waterfront have finally been unveiled by Associated Engineering Services Ltd. of Vancouver.

Site development has been talked of for years by owners Marathon Realty, the real estate arm of Canadian Pacific.

The company plans to construct a 200-unit motor hotel, a 50-boat marina, restaurant, beer parlors and cocktail lounge, swimming pool and night club.

Vancouver Island Coach Lines Terminal and smaller businesses now occupy the land along with Butler Lefarge Cement in another building.

The land is east of the Harbour Park shopping centre, also owned by Marathon Realty.

Date for the start of construction had not been set, and construction costs have not been released.

Bangladesh mother with starving child

Famine Camps Multiply

DACCA (AP) — Refugees, mostly women and children, have been streaming into the Bangladesh capital by the hundreds this month in search of food.

They are victims of the most severe famine to strike the Indian subcontinent in at least three decades. They have come to Dacca by boat, by train and on foot. As they reach the train or boat terminal or are found lying along the pavements of the city, they are taken by police to camps, known as "gruel kitchens."

The government has set up 4,500 such camps throughout the country to provide emergency relief for some of the more than five million who face starvation among the country's 77 million persons.

The government placed armed guards at the Dacca camps to keep those inside from roaming the capital's streets, causing social unrest. Some diplomats offered what they said were conservative guesses that a million Bengalis would die of starvation or related diseases, based on reports reaching Dacca from the government and volunteer organizations. This will be within six weeks, they said, before the autumn food crop is harvested.

The daily diet at the camps usually is limited to a few hard chapatis, or wheat pancakes.

Much of the summr crop was destroyed by floods.

The Bangladesh government has arranged to import emergency food shipments. Much of the food aid will not arrive for another month, however, by which time it is feared hundreds of thousands will have starved.

The three Dacca camps are set up in an abandoned industrial estate and in a high school and a college closed indefinitely because of the famine. Each has a population of 3,000, and the number is growing by at least 200 daily from as far as 100 miles away.

Supervisors at the camp at Khilgaon High School in northeast Dacca say about three persons a day do leave the camp. They are taken to a public burial ground.

JOB SKILLS, TRAINING TALKS TOPIC

Trade unionists and employers will meet in a panel discussion next week to discuss skill shortages and training needs in B.C.

The one-day conference Nov. 1, will be sponsored by the department of labor and held at the Vancouver Airport's Hyatt House.

One panel will discuss "what responsibility does industry have to provide training and why are we not able to meet our skill shortages?"

University of B.C. commerce dean Dr. Noel Hall will moderate that panel and will be joined by four labor and management representatives.

Vancouver Community College dean H. E. Justesen will moderate the second panel to discuss "what type of infrastructure is needed to meet the present and future manpower needs."

Indians Promised Funds

A northern Indian band was promised funds from the province Tuesday to study possibilities for economic development in the area.

Representatives of the Stuart-Trembleur band met with Human Resources Minister Norm Levi and were told the government would pay for the appointment of an adviser ot create a development plan for the band.

The Indians are seeking $7 million in damages because they allege the B.C. Railway's northern extension through their land has taken away their livelihood.

Band counsellor Eddie John said the railway extension north of Fort St. James, has taken away the Indians' self-sufficiency and independence and left them dependent on welfare.

Levi agreed the construction had virtually destroyed hunting in the area and said the government's wildlife branch is working to try to restore trails and streams on the band's traditional hunting lands.

The $7 million claim was not discussed at Tuesday's meeting however, said Levi, since the focus was on new economic development.

Dragger's Net Hauls Up Plane

MARYSTOWN, Nfld. (CP) — The wreckage of what appeared to be a Second World War fighter plane was hauled up in a fishing net about 20 miles off this southern Newfoundland community Tuesday.

The dragger Atlantic Lindsay was undergoing sea trials when she cast her net in Placentia Bay and caught the fighter.

The wreck was lifted intact, but the engine fell overboard and was lost while the crew attempted to get it aboard in heavy seas. The rest of the plane was brought into Marystown. There were no skeletons in the cockpit.

Experts from the department of national defence were expected in Marystown today from Halifax to inspect the wreckage.

Though covered with seaweed, the wreck was in good condition and its aluminum fusilage appeared to have suffered no corrosion.

Its armaments were intact. RCMP removed the guns and ammunition and put them away for safekeeping.

No identification had been made by this morning, but the single engine propeller-driven aircraft appeared to be a U.S. fighter of Second World War vintage.

Woods Weekend to Challenge Urbanites

To go "orienteering" all a person needs is a map, a compass — and woods to get lost in.

Orienteering is a growing sport on Vancouver Island, and its aim is precisely not to get lost.

It can be quite a challenge to urbanites as (above, from left) Kay Dixon, Anna Conarroe, Judith Armstrong and Keith Davies, all of Victoria, discover as they scrutinize a map of the area.

Victoria's YM-YWCA is offering an orienteering weekend for young people 15 and over on Oct. 26 and 27 at Camp Thunderbird near Sooke.

By participating in games and races through the woods, sportsmen learn directional skills and wilderness common sense.

Fee will be $20 per person. Heated accommodation and meals are provided.

MUSIC AWARDS TO STUDENTS

Nine silver medals and six scholarships were awarded Victoria students in recent examinations conducted by the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto.

The medalists are Theresa Lowe, Grade III piano; Anna Lowe, Grade VI piano; D. Susan Watson, Grade VIII organ; Robin E. Powell, Grade X singing; Sandra Jane Foweraker, Grade III speech arts; Lynda-Mary Greene, Grade IV speech arts; Elizabeth McMinn, Grade VII speech arts; Thomas Williams, Grade II bassoon; Gerald Wayne Rennie, Grade III accordion.

Medals are awarded annually to candidates receiving the highest mark in their subject and grade in the province of B.C.

Frederick Harris Scholarships are awarded to those students obtaining the highest mark in their grade in the four Western provinces.

Medalists who also won scholarships were Robin Powell, Theresa and Anna Lowe and Thomas Williams. Two others awarded scholarships were Hilary Wallis, Grade VI violin, and James Maclean, Grade X euphonium.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A young man in provincial court Tuesday morning said he thought spending time in jail would be good for him, but he apparently changed his mind a few hours later.

Gregory Alan Howard, 19, of 1304 Charlton, told Judge William Ostler he preferred to go to jail rather than pay $650 in fines for criminal negligence in operating a motor vehicle and driving without a driver's certificate.

"I think it would do me some good," he said.

Ostler, who ordered Howard to spend three months in jail if the fines were not paid, said he could return later if he changed his mind about going to jail.

Howard returned after the noon break and said, "I would like time to pay, I have changed my mind."

Ostler then required payment at $100 a month.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald told the court Howard was clocked at speeds up to 95 miles an hour by police who started chasing him about 1:50 a.m. Thursday on Cadboro Bay Road.

Police had wanted to stop him for a routine check.

During the chase he went through two flashing lights at high speeds and twice crossed the centre line before being stopped by Saanich police.

Macdonald said that Howard, who pleaded guilty was trying to out-run police because he had picked up a hitch-hiker who had some marijuana.

Monty Jones, 21, of no fixed address, received concurrent six-month definite and six-month indeterminate jail sentences for possession stolen property and for breaking and entering.

Jones, who pleaded guilty, broke into a trailer July 9 parked at Fort and Wharf and stole a radio and flashlight.

Police later found him on a wharf under Johnson Street bridge.

The radio was in a boat and the flashlight, he told police, had been thrown into the water.

The charge of possessing stolen property concerned picking up a knapsack which belong to another person in the 500-block Yates July 11.

The knapsack contained a knife worth $15 and food and clothing worth about $100.

Jones had planned to sell the contents.

Defence counsel George Jones said his client's troubles with the law are related to alcohol and asked Ostler to give a sentence that would not crush him.

David Richard McAleer, 21, of 1235 Balmoral, was remanded to Nov. 7 for sentencing on two counts of break, entry and theft.

McAleer rang door bells at two houses on the 700-block Pemberton on Oct. 7, then acted as if he was at the wrong address when the occupants responded. He later entered a Rockland Avenue residence after finding the door unlocked and removed $23 from a wallet.

He also stole $2.40 the same day from a jar in a bedroom of a Balmoral Road residence. McAleer pleaded guilty.

Two persons charged last week with setting fire to the Jehovah's Witness Kingdom Hall at 1059 Joan Oct. 13 elected trial by judge and jury.

Preliminary hearing for John Robert Atkinson, 20, of Vancouver, and Terry Darrow Emerson, 20, of 1195 Trans-Canada, was set for Jan. 29-30.

Trial date for Saanich police constable Allan Kangas, charged with driving an emergency vehicle without due regard for safety, was set for Feb. 25.

Kangas' cruiser was in collision with a car driven by Barbara Anne Payne, 35, of 831 Ellery, on Sept. 2 at Trans-Canada and Tillicum. Mrs. Payne died as a result of the crash.

Lawrence David Bevan, 18, of 3462 Bethune, was fined $75 for possessing cannabis resin.

Grant Bird Cunningham, 33, of Powell River, was given a 20-day jail term and had his licence suspended for impaired driving. He had previously been convicted of the same offence in Powell River.

Garry Fraik, 22, of 2575 Wentwich, was fined $450 and had his licence suspended for impaired driving, and for the same offence Gordon George Boland, 31, of 450 Dallas, was fined $400 and Walter Eckert, 21, of 1779 Laval, was fined $250 and banned from driving for 50 days.

Sophie Wolochow samples part of Hadassah display

YOUR TURN TO COOK:

Cabbage Rolls

By SOPHIE WOLOCHOW

(Today's reader recipe was sent in by Mrs. David Wolochow, of 412-450 Simcoe and has examples of what will be displayed at the annual Hadassah Bazaar next Wednesday. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would gladly share, please send it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

The Hadassah Bazaars across Canada have become famous. Here displayed by the cook who is secretary of the local chapter, is a tempting platter of meat and cabbage rolls, which are very popular with Bazaar patrons.

The Cheese Cake is a luscious dessert at any time and since it is made with cottage cheese is not too rich for the average palate.

The Bazaar which takes place on Wednesday, Oct. 30 from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall, 932 Balmoral, will feature a hot beef luncheon, reasonably priced, and a corned beef sandwich bar. The delicatessen booth will feature chopped liver, freshly made, dill pickles, sweet and sour meat balls, meat and cabbage rolls, and many other specialties such as blintzes, knishes and kugel.

Home-made candy will be featured this year, and the bake table will as usual be laden with home-made bread, bagels, buns, rolls, cakes and cookies.

There will be an attractive choice of raffles, and three door prizes. For flower and plant lovers there will be a beautiful and colorful booth.

MEAT AND CABBAGE ROLLS (PRAKIS)

1 medium sized cabbage
1½ lbs. ground meat
2 tbsp. raw rice
2 large onions
1 egg
small piece of brisket

Remove cabbage leaves whole, and pour boiling water over them. Cover and let stand. Add rice, egg, pepper and salt to the meat. Put brisket into pot with sliced onion, pepper, salt and 2 tbsp. sugar. Cook over medium heat until golden brown. Drain cabbage, put a heaping tablespoon of meat mixture in each cabbage leaf and roll, completely enclosing meat. Put each roll into the pot with onion and brisket; add one large can of tomatoes. Cook slowly, shaking pot often so balls will not stick, for about 4 hours. If desired, add lemon juice to taste. This should have a sweet and sour taste.

CHEESE CAKE

1 lb. graham wafers
2 lbs. cottage cheese
2½ cups white sugar
4 eggs
½ lemon (juice and rind)
½ orange (juice and rind)
½ lb. melted butter
1 tsp. vanilla

Mix crumbed wafers with ¼ lb. butter. Line 8x11½ pan with half crumbs. Mix cheese with rest of butter, vanilla, eggs and sugar. Add juice and rind of lemon and orange. Pour on to crumbs and put remainder of crumbs on top. Bake ½ hour in moderate oven (350 degrees). Cut when cool.

Crunchy Mackerel Casserole

7 oz. can mackerel, drained well.
1 cup finely diced carrots
1 cup finely diced parsnips
1 cup finely diced celery
2 Tbsp butter
2 Tbsp butter
2 Tbsp flour
1 cup milk
½ cup walnuts — chopped
¼ tsp dill weed
2 Tbsp fresh, parsley chopped
1½ tsp salt
¼ tsp pepper.

Saute the vegetables in 2 Tbsp butter for 15 minutes, layer the vegetables and mackerel in a greased casserole, reserving ½ cup of vegetables. Make a cream sauce by combing flour with 2 Tbsp melted butter in a sauce pan, blend in milk slowly and heat stirring continually until thickened, season and add dill and parsley. Pour sauce over the layers and garnish with the remaining vegetables and walnuts. Serves 4-6.

JUST A FEW OF THOSE THINGS

SHEPWAY, England (UPI) — Damon Robinson says he is not upset about being fired as a garbage truck driver for the local council.

On Monday last week he drove his truck into a ditch. On Wednesday he ran it into a brick wall. On Thursday the clutch on his truck burned out. On Friday he tipped the truck over in a country lane.

"I don't feel bad about them kicking me out," said Damon, a former British Army tank driver, "I don't think I'm a good driver any more."

Family Safari For Home Goodies

HALIFAX (CP) — It's a neighborhood family affair and an all-seasons' weekly safari.

Mothers and kids, and sometimes dads, take part in the Friday and Saturday morning fun for shopping for the best and freshest home grown, home-baked and home-crafted goodies.

Going to market has been a family tradition in Halifax for generations, ever since the first "Green Market" was opened along waterfront streets in 1750, a year after this historic port city was founded.

Faithful customers and stall holders have followed the market through successive moves from the waterfront area to its current site in the airy lower level of the industrial northern sector of the city.

Stalls are replete with crusty bread loaves, cakes and cookies. Fresh-churned butter and cottage cheese; thick cream, new-laid eggs, poultry and rabbits in season, reward the buyer as she wends her way through the market's kaleidoscope of sound and color.

Sparkling jars of mouth-watering jams, jellies and relishes; early summer lettuce and beet greens and later, a profusion of other taste-tempting vegetables only hours from the good earth, catch the eye of the discerning gourmet.

Potato Chowder For Lunch

1 cup diced raw potato
1 small onion or 1 whole garlic clove
1 cup diced celery with leaves
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1½ cup boiling water
½ tsp salt
1 cup milk (skim milk powder with water)
Paprika

Simmer the prepared vegetables in the boiling salted water until tender, 15 or 20 minutes.

Break the potato and other vegetables with a wide wooden fork if they still hold their shape, masking them a little against the side of the saucepan.

Add the milk made with the powdered skim. Bring to boiling point, stirring to prevent sticking.

Serve hot, sprinkle with a little paprika. Paprika is not a hot spice but is the powdered form of dried sweet red pepper, pleasant and even beneficial with its trace of vitamin C.

A special note for those who prepare lunch for one person —use these quantities and store half the soup in a covered bowl for the next day. But be sure to enliven it with either plenty of freshly chopped parsley, chives or cress.

Apple Flan Dessert

Why not use cooking or all-purpose apples in an apple flan recipe.

Nowadays, flans can easily be baked in an ordinary pie plate. Crowned with whipped cream and cherries, this dessert is bound to be a favorite with all apple-lovers.

Base:

3 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla
2-3 cup flour

Filling:

¼ teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup applesauce
¼ cup butter
½ cup brown sugar
3 peeled apples, thinly sliced

To make filling, add vanilla and white sugar to applesauce. Melt butter in frypan and stir in brown sugar, until melted. Add sliced apples one layer at a time. Simmer gently, turning occasionally, until apples are tender (about 5 minutes). Remove apples, drain and cool. Pour applesauce onto base and arrange apples in overlapping layer on top. Glaze apples with some of remaining brown sugar sauce. Garnish with whipped cream and cherries. 6 servings.

Eat Your Bread Whole (Wheat)

By MARY MOORE

Salmon, meat and egg sandwich fillings are protein-rich

Without being coached or coaxed by me, Gary and Davey described the lunches in their cafeteria. They both agreed that they were the only people who ate whole wheat bread sandwiches.

Nutrition Canada has revealed that Canadians as a whole need to eat more nutritive food and have more physical exercise.

Without going into a rage I would like to urge you to switch entirely to whole wheat bread from white bread. This will take some doing for you probably will get complaints from your family but explain why and they might stop complaining: the outside cover of the whole wheat kernel contains calcium, phosphorous, iron and vitamin B — all valuable nutrients that are absent in white bread. We all need these nutrients so get on the whole wheat bread wagon.

School lunches are the theme today and I suggest that you organize the fillings to make sandwich-making easier early in the morning.

SANDWICH FILLINGS:

Salmon:

2 cans (7¾ oz.) salmon
salt and pepper to taste
¼ c. nutty granutola (or nuts)
¼ c. seedless raisins
mayonnaise to moisten
12 slices whole wheat bread, buttered

Flake salmon, mashing and mixing in bones. Mix with remaining ingredients. Store in covered jar or tupperware container — will keep well for 3 or 4 days. Makes six 2-slice whole wheat sandwiches.

Egg-Olive:

2 hard-cooked eggs
one 3-oz. pkg. cream cheese (room temperature)
½ tsp. prepared mustard
1 tsp. grated raw onion or finely chopped green onion or chives
6 chopped stuffed olives OR 1 tbsp chopped salad olives
2 tbsp. mayonnaise
8 slices whole wheat bread

Chop the egg finely. Mix with the cheese, mustard, onion, olives and mayonnaise and blend to spreading consistency. Spread on four slices buttered whole wheat bread. Makes four 2-slice whole wheat bread sandwiches.

Ham and Relish:

1 c. cooked ground or chopped ham or other leftover meat
4 tbsp. chopped pickle
1 tsp. prepared mustard
3 or 4 tbsp. salad dressing or mayonnaise
salt and pepper to taste.

Mix together and spread on 4 slices buttered whole wheat bread.

Top each with another slice of buttered whole wheat bread. Makes four 2-slice whole wheat bread sandwiches.

In countless households a pan of squares is a must.

When I give you a new receipe for squares I know it will be clipped and filed. Dave is so agreeable and so capable I load him with responsibility when he is here. I handed him a roughly written recipe to test. The result was a pan of delicious Lemon Strips. You should clip and save this recipe for they are pretty and tasty enough for an elegant tea party.

DAVE'S LEMON STRIPS
(9x9" pan)

Base:

½ c. shortening or margarine or butter
2 tbsp. brown sugar
1 c. unsifted all-purpose flour
1 c. unsweetened coconut — divided.

gether the shortening or margarine or butter and brown sugar then mix in the flour evenly. Press into 9x9" pan smoothly and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 15 minutes. Remove from oven and cool.

Meanwhile to make the Filling — combine filling ingredients in a pot being sure you beat the eggs first and stir constantly over medium heat until thick. Remove from heat and spread over cooled base.

Filling:

2 eggs, beaten
2 tbsp. margarine or butter
½ c. sugar
grated rind 1 lemon
2 tbsp. lemon juice

Topping:

2 egg whites
½ c. sugar

To make Topping beat egg whites with sugar until very stiff. Remove beaters and fold in ¾ cup of the coconut. Spread over lemon filling. Sprinkle top with remaining ¼ cup coconut. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes or until tinged with gold. When cold cut into 2 x 1" strips. These have a zesty lemon lavour that is popular with young and old.

Cucumber Soup Chill

3 medium cucumbers
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup diced carrot
¼ cup butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups chicken bouillon
3 cups milk

Peel and seed cucumbers. Shred 1-3 cup cucumber for garnish. Cut remainder in ½-inch slices and saute with onion and carrot in butter about 5 minutes. Stir in flour and seasonings. Gradually add bouillion and milk, stir and cook until soup thickens (about 5 minutes). Pour into blender and blend until smooth. Chill. Garnish with shredded cucumber. Serve very cold. Makes about 6 cups.

Maria Bonta's 'Beefzia' Culinary Breakthrough

WASHINGTON (WP) — Let history record that in mid-1974, as attention in Washington was riveted on matters of state, a culinary breakthrough was recorded in nearby Alexandria, Va. There in an unextraordinary home kitchen Maria Bonta, an Italian-American artist possessed of considerable charm and creativity, formulated the "beefzia."

"The burger and the pizza meet," declared Mrs. Bonta's daughter, Vanna, giving a contemporary interpretation to the dish. What her mother had done was sitting there for all to see and, happily, to taste as well.

She had taken a traditional topping from a pizza and placed a layer of ground beef under it in place of the dough.

A normal oven proved sufficient to firm and cook the beef "crust" making a special, high-temperature pizza oven unnecessary. Therefore "beefzia" made from scratch has replaced frozen, or reheated, store-bought pizza at the Bonta's.

The resulting gain in protein and in flavor are considerable. The flavors are blended and the crust is juicy, not soggy or like cardboard as dough can be. But the loss in total calories that might be expected when beefzia is on the menu usually doesn't occur, because Mrs. Bonta cannot resist serving some of the bread she bakes herself; and few can resist the bread.

Rumor has it that a beef-base pizza was conceived some time ago by a food company. Yet no one who knows her would doubt that Mrs. Bonta's research was done independently.

"You can bake this (at 475 degrees) or set the temperature at broil and cook it in the middle rack of the oven," Mrs. Bonta said. "Either way the time is 10 minutes, but we prefer the higher temperature. The baked one has a softer crust and gives off more juice. Sometimes I make them as individual servings with, each round slightly larger than an English muffin. Those cook for 10 minutes, too."

BEEFZIA
(Serves 4 to 6)

1 pound, 3 ounces lean ground beef.
¼ cup olive oil.
Salt, pepper to taste.
½ to ¾ teaspoon dried oregano or 1 scant tablespoon crushed fresh oregano.
8 ounces mozzarella cheese, sliced thinly and cut into 1½ inch squares.
1 can (2 ounces) flat anchovies, drained and cut into small pieces.
6 to 8 medium tomatoes (very ripe) peeled, seeded and cut into small chunks or 8 canned Italian tomatoes.

Take a 16-piece pizza pan (or two 8-inch pie pans) and lightly oil the bottom. Pat beef into an even layer ¼ to one-third inch thick. Use some of the oil to coat surface, then spinkle on salt, pepper and oregano.

Add cheese pieces in one layer, then place anchovy pieces and tomato pieces evenly over the cheese. Salt tomatoes, sprinkle pepper and oregano over the entire surface and drizzle on remaining oil.

Place on middle shelf of a preheated oven set at broil and cook for 10 minutes, or until beef is browned and firm and cheese is melted and soft.

Meat will shrink from sides of pan. Carefully pour off collected juice and oil and cut into wedges before serving.

WHEN WILL "W" STRIKE AGAIN?

Wheat Germ Flavor Provides Versatility

In spite of the growing popularity of wheat germ in recent years, many people still do not know exactly what it is and how to use it. Wheat germ is the most vital part of the wheat kernel. It is that portion of the wheat which germinates if the kernel is planted, hence the name. The "heart of the wheat," as it is called, is removed in the milling of white flour and refined cereals because in its raw state it is highly perishable. Further processing of raw wheat germ stabilizes it, increases its shelf life and makes it a very desirable food.

Wheat germ has always been most popular mixed with or sprinkled over breakfast cereals. But its rich nut-like flavor makes it a versatile cooking ingredient also. Wheat germ added to bread, main dishes, desserts and snack foods provides new taste appeal.

Here are a few ideas for using wheat germ in your own recipes to turn them into something special. For a casserole topping, saute wheat germ in melted butter or margarine and sprinkle on the casserole before baking. Toss a few tablespoons of wheat germ with salad greens for an interesting combination. Try scrambled eggs a la wheat germ. Use one tablespoon for every two eggs. Mix it in while scrambling the eggs. For a meat loaf or hamburger patties wheat germ is ideal as a meat extender. Add one-quarter cup wheat germ and two tablespoons liquid to one pound of ground meat.

The home economists, Agriculture Canada have tested and approved two excellent wheat germ recipes. The recipe for "Granola," a delightful breakfast cereal, makes a large quantity, which is easily stored at room temperature. "Wheat Germ Whole Wheat Muffins" are made extra good by the addition of wheat germ.

GRANOLA

6 cups quick-cooking rolled oats
1 cup unsweetened wheat germ
1 cup finely chopped blanched almonds
1-3 cup sesame seeds
1 cup flaked coconut
¾ cup oil
1½ cups honey (1 pound)

Combine first 5 ingredients Add oil and honey and mix well. Spread cereal thinly on large flat baking pans. Bake at 250 deg. F. until golden brown (about 1½ hours), stirring every 15 minutes. Cool. Pack in covered container. Serve plain or with milk. May be stored at room temperature 6 weeks. Makes about 14 cups.

WHEAT GERM WHOLE WHEAT MUFFINS

1 cup all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup whole wheat flour
½ cup unsweetened wheat germ
1 beaten egg
1¼ cups milk
¼ cup melted shortening

Stir first four ingredients together. Stir in whole wheat flour and wheat germ. Combine egg, milk and shortening; stir quickly into flour mixture until mixed but still lumpy. Fill greased muffin tins two-thirds full and bake at 375 deg. F. until browned (about 30 minutes). Makes 12 medium muffins.

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — North Vancouver District Council has turned down a request by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 389, that it reconsider disbanding the municipal construction crew. About 47 employees would be laid off at the end of the month.

Chinese Cooking Enhances Vegetables

Have you ever wondered why vegetables cooked by the Chinese have such a marvellous texture and excellent flavor and color? These characteristics can be attributed to their method of cooking vegetables — "stir-frying." We have borrowed this method and call it "panning." What a lovely way it is to prepare the many fresh Canadian vegetables on the market now.

Panning is a simple way of cooking vegetables on top of the stove. Rapid cooking preserves their natural color, flavor and optimum food value. They are especially attractive when interesting shapes are used and contrasting colors and flavors are combined. If more than one vegetable is used, start those that require the longest cooking first.

To pan vegetables, melt butter in a large heavy frypan, add prepared vegetables, and sprinkle with salt. It may be necessary to add a little water to some to prevent scorching. Cover frypan, heat quickly to form steam, then reduce heat and cook gently until vegetables are tender-crisp. Shake or stir frequently to avoid sticking and serve the vegetables already adorned with their own buttery sauce.

Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada suggests different cooking times for various vegetables in order to capture the maximum flavor and color:

Vegetable (6 servings)	Butter	Salt	Time
Green or Wax Beans, 1" diagonal slices or Frenched	¼ cup	¾ tspn	18-20 mins.
Peas, shelled	¼ cup	¾ tspn	5-10 mins.
Celery, ¼" diagonal slices	¼ cup	¾ tspn	10-12 mins.
Carrots, 1" chunks or thin slices	¼ cup	¾ tspn	16-20 mins.
Green peppers, 1" chunks or ½" wide strips	¼ cup	¾ tspn	6 mins.

When baby sleeps the family sleeps

The dearest baby in the world — yours — isn't quite so endearing when baby can't sleep at nights — and lets you know! Neither you nor anyone else in the family get much sleep either. Yet a piece of a Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuit in baby's bed-time bottle is often all that's needed for baby to sleep soundly all through the night. Just crush a piece of Farley's in baby's formula or milk. Farley's dissolves instantly, thus may be fed through the nipple of the nursing bottle. Baby will love it. Most babies do. Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits are good for growing babies, for Farley's contain added Riboflavin, Niacin, Iron and Calcium. Get Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits at your grocer's today — let all the family get a good night's rest tonight.

Cookie Handouts for Halloween

By HILDA BEASTALL

A new way of exchanging recipes with neighbors is to make a batch of special cookies for handouts on Halloween.

If you have children making the rounds, you can let it be known that you are not "shelling out" candies. The news will travel as such things do, and it may result in a rash of worthwhile home baking in a few neighborhoods.

The cost will be less too, and any cookies which happen to remain are good food for any occasion — morning coffee, afternoon tea, or carried lunches.

Make a batch of these goodies well ahead of time. They will keep (in separate tins) for a few days. Then put about four into a small plastic bag with a tie to keep it closed.

WHEATOAT COOKIES

1 cup soft margarine;
2 Tbsp. demerara sugar;
2 eggs (small);
1 cup wholewheat flour;
½ cup unbleached flour;
1 tsp. baking powder;
½ tsp. baking soda;
½ tsp. salt;
¼ cup wheat germ;
1 tsp. brewer's yeast;
a pinch of cinnamon;
a few gratings of nutmeg;
¾ cup rolled oats.

Cream the margarine in mixing bowl; add sugar and egg. Beat with wooden mixing spoon.

Measure into sifter the other dry ingredients except rolled oats.

Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture gradually, mix to blend, then blend in the rolled oats.

Drop in neat mounds on ungreased cookie sheet. Flatten slightly with knife tip.

Bake in 350 oven or a little under, for about 25 minutes or until lightly brown and cookies will move freely on the sheet.

Remove at once and invert on large plate to cool. Makes 36 cookies.

PEANUT-FRUIT SQUARES

½ cup soft margarine;
1 Tbsp. dark molasses;
1 Tbsp. demerara sugar;
2 small eggs;
¾ cup wholewheat flour;
¼ cup wheat germ;
½ cup chopped raw peanuts;
½ cup mixed fine coconut;
chopped dates and raisins;

Cream the margarine, molasses, sugar and eggs in mixing bowl.

Measure and mix in remaining ingredients. Spread in a lightly greased 6x10x2-inch pan. Smooth a little and bake in a 350 oven for about 30 minutes, or until knife comes out clean.

Cut into 15 squares at once, and allow to partially cool, then turn upside down to finish cooling.

This is a delicious, chewy, flavorful fruit square, a favorite with adults as well as youngsters.

MOLASSES DROP COOKIES

½ cup soft margarine;
2 Tbsp. demerara sugar;
1 large egg (or 2 small);
1 tsp. vinegar;
2 Tbsp. dark molasses;
2 cups unbleached flour;
½ cup wholewheat flour;
1 tsp. baking powder;
¼ tsp. salt;
¼ tsp. ground ginger or
1 tsp. chopped candied ginger.

Cream margarine with sugar and molasses. Add egg and beat with spoon. Beat in the vinegar. This has a leavening effect and gives a pleasant texture.

Sift together flours, baking powder, salt and ground ginger if used. The chopped candied ginger makes a distinct change.

Add the sifted ingredients to the creamed mixture. Drop by teaspoon into flat mounds on a greased cookie sheet.

Bake at about 375 degs. for 10 to 15 minutes until becoming brown. Makes about 48 cookies.

Provoked to Scrap, But Still Punished

DEAR ABBY: If someone tries to pick a fight with you at school and you have done everything you can to avoid a fight, but that person starts pushing you around, and you have to use force to defend yourself, do you think it's fair that the person who was trying to defend himself should get punished just the same as the troublemaker?

What is a person supposed to do when he is picked on by someone who is trying to get him into a fight? I am not going to just stand there and let him push me around. Fighting is against the rules on our schoolgrounds. — Unfairly Punished.

DEAR UN: When someone tries to provoke a fight by pushing you around, instead of pushing HIM around, report him to the authorities.

This may sound like the chicken's way out, but it's the only way to protect yourself from the punishment of breaking the "no fighting" rules at your school (P.S. You might consider taking some lesson in case he ever tries to push you around OFF the schoolgrounds.)

DEAR ABBY: I read about that mother who never wanted children but she accidentally had two anyway. She said not all women were cut out to be mothers, and she was one of them.

She may be interested in my story: My husband and I always wanted a large family. Ten months after we were married I gave birth to a healthy baby boy. We couldn't wait to have more.

Twelve miscarriages later, I had another son. He was born dead.

A year later, I gave birth to another son.

Eighteen months later, a third son was born, but we soon discovered that our second and third sons were both severely deaf.

They needed special education. After thousands of dollars worth of tutoring and much hard work, our two deaf sons are now able to talk nearly as well as our normal son.

I wanted children desperately, and their being handicapped doesn't make us love them any less. Some handicaps can be overcome.

I hope that mother realizes that in her refusal to love her children she is handicapped. And I hope she overcomes her handicap before it handicaps her unloved children. — Lucky.

DEAR LUCKY: Your children are lucky, too. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the young mother who had the courage to admit that she felt "stuck" with her two kids who were both accidents.

I have one child, but she wasn't an accident. I really wanted a child, but I soon realized that I wasn't cut out to be a mother. I have never abused my child, but I am positive that I do not want another one.

Now if my in-laws and friends would just leave me alone, and quit telling me how "wrong" it is to raise only one child, I would appreciate it.

And if this letter is printed, I hope my husband's family reads it and sees the light. Thank you. — One Is Beautiful.

DEAR ONE: Leave nothing so important to chance. Clip this column and mail it to them.

Chicken Livers Orientale

This month, a touch of the Orient to your menus.

Chinese and French cooking are considered by many to be the two greatest cuisines in the world.

The Chinese believe that food should not only be pleasurable, but that it is also a symbol of life, health and luck. Our recipe, Chicken Livers Orientale, is a very colorful, economical dish. The chicken livers can be replaced by any of the following: chicken breast, beef tenderloin, Boston steak, pork tenderloin, or even shrimp. The steps are always the same. The meat or fish should be cooked separately and added to the cooked vegetables just before serving. All ingredients should be bite-size. It is a good idea to have all ingredients on hand before the actual cooking.

Serve Chicken Livers Orientale with plain steamed or boiled rice.

This recipe was created and tested by Pol Martin, Director of the Pol Martin Culinary School.

1½ tablespoons oil
1½ lbs chicken livers, cleaned
1 large onion peeled and thinly sliced
1 green pepper seeded and thinly sliced
1 red pepper seeded and thinly sliced
2 garlic cloves smashed and finely chopped
1 pound mushrooms thinly sliced
4 water chestnuts thinly sliced
2 tomatoes, cut into wedges salt
freshly ground pepper

Cut the chicken livers in two. Heat the oil in a saute pan, over high heat. When the oil is hot, add the chicken livers and saute, uncovered, over high heat, for 4 to 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Set the chicken livers aside on a heated platter.

Immediately add the onions, green and red pepper and garlic clove to the pan; saute for 2 minutes, uncovered. Add the mushrooms and saute for 2 minutes, stirring frequently.

Return the chicken livers to the vegetables and rewarm for a few seconds.

Correct the seasonings.

Arrange on top of a bed of rice and serve immediately.

No Success With Shabby Kitchenware

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We were recapitulating recently — for the several hundredth time — the scope of the cooking revolution in America during the last two decades. It seems light years since crepes and souffles and well-made omelettes were a novelty. Steak tartare has become a standard businessman's lunch and presto genovese has almost become commonplace. The beef Wellington syndrome is, Lord willing, happily receding and rank amateurs are turning out guiches, Lorraine or otherwise.

One thing that has irked us about this whole gastronomic coming of age, however, is the standard of kitchen equipment that seems to prevail. We are constantly astonished, if not to say appalled, at some of the fairly well-off kitchen enthusiasts who outfit their work area with the shabbiest, least expensive merchandise available and expect stellar if not to say effortless accomplishments. It is tantamount to playing tennis in track shoes while using a racquet with loosened strings.

Since we first became interested in cooking we have believed that function is paramount in kitchen equipment. If the utensil proves to be esthetically pleasing, so much the better.

Dansk Design in Mount Kisco, N.Y., has just imported an impressive new line labeled (for better or for worse) Dansk Gourmet. We are much taken with the function of a great deal of this merchandise. And find it esthetically agreeable, too.

Dansk Gourmet includes saucepans made in England. They have certain attributes not hitherto encountered. The pans are made of polished, die-cast aluminum and have an excellent "feel," which is to say weight in relation to side and shape.

The saucepans, in graduated sizes, possess a pouring spout plus lids with a deep sawtooth edge which, when lined up with the spout, can be used for draining anything from spaghetti to stringbeans. The saucepans are priced from about $17.95 for a 2-quart saucepan to $18.95 for a 3-quart size.

The new Dansk line also has first-quality paring and chef's knives. We are particularly impressed with the latter. The knives made in France, have admirable balance — weight and shape — that contributes to precision in cutting. Although made of carbon steel with plastic handles, they are dishwasher proof. They are priced from about $11.95 for an 8-inch chef's knife to $14.95 for the 9½-inch size.

Like most good knives, these will require sharpening at intervals and a sharpening steel in the same line is available. It costs $11.95.

In addition, the new line includes functional, substantially constructed skillets and Dutch ovens as well. These are also handsome enough to be display pieces. The skillets cost from about $15.95 for the 9-inch size; $17.95 for the 11 inch model. Dutch ovens cost from about $22.95 for the 4½-quart to $29.95 for the 6¾-quart.

Remaining pieces in the line — all well worth examining — are cutting boards, work boards and pastry boards plus mixing bowls in graduated sizes.

Dansk Gourmet is available in leading department stores around the country.

So much has been made over the Cuisinarts Food Processor — that mechanical marvel imported from France — it has gone almost unnoticed that the same importer is responsible for a complete line of outstanding and widely available cookware ranging from small 1½-cup saucepans to an 8-quart stock pot with cover.

We have used Cuisinarts cookware with pleasure and continuing satisfaction for the last two years and can testify in depth to its merits. The cookware, made in France, is in stainless steel with a steel-covered aluminum reinforced bottom. Such a bottom is an even heat conductor.

Cottage Cheese Pie a Treat All Year

All the ingredients for this delicious pie are readily available. Treat the family to this delicious treat now — and serve it all year 'round, too!

Dairy products needed are: Cottage Cheese, butter, whipping cream, eggs.

To make the crust:

1½ cups crushed graham wafer or vanilla wafers (a combination of both is excellent)
⅓ cup brown sugar
⅓ to ½ cups melted butter

Combine crumbs and sugar, blend in melted butter. Press firmly into a 9 inch spring form pan. Chill at least one hour — or bake in a 350 degree oven for 8 minutes. (The baked crust is firmer).

To make the filling:

1—14 oz. tin crushed pineapple
1—15 oz. pkg. frozen strawberries (use fresh if desired)
2 Tbsp. plus 1 tsp. unflavored gelatin
½ cup plus 2 Tbsp. fruit syrup
4 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¾ cup sugar
2 tsp. grated lemon peel
¼ tsp. salt
3 cups cottage cheese (pureed)
1 Tbsp. vanilla or 2 tsp. almond extract
2 half pints whipping cream

Drain pineapple and strawberries, reserving syrup. Soften gelatin in the ½ cup fruit syrup. Combine the egg yolks, sugar, lemon peel, salt and the 2 Tbsp. of reserved fruit syrup. Cook over medium heat in heavy saucepan, stirring constantly, until a smooth custard is formed. This will be thin. Remove from heat. Add softened gelatin; stir until dissolved. Cool slightly. Add pineapple, strawberries, pureed cottage cheese. (To puree cottage cheese, either blend in the blender or press through a sieve). Add flavouring of your choice. Whip 2 cups cream and fold in. Chill until firm (about 5 hours). Loosen sides from pan with spatula before removing. If desired, garnish with strawberries, pineapple slices and remaining whipped cream.

Note: if fresh strawberries are used, increase the sugar to 1 cup. Serves 12.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thursday, Oct. 24

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Path is cleared of obstacles. You get green light and friendly reception. Key now is to consolidate, to push ahead, to utilize contacts in constructive manner. Cancer, Capricorn persons help show you the way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent now is on career, how to fulfill ambitions, how you related to professional superiors. Be flexible. Give yourself room to grow, expand. A friend makes contact with one who can provide you with needed material.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spotlight now is on perceiving potential. Trust your ESP. You are seeing what can be — and what you can make of yourself. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons could figure in picture. Write, publish and advertise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money which relates to partner, mate has direct effect on you. There is need for change — and greater communication. Be perceptive enough to study fine print. Analyze situation — give logic a chance to operate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home, family, serious relationships are featured. Taurus, Libra individuals could figure prominently. Make intelligent concession to one who means much to you. By so doing, you actually will be taking a step toward happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Low key approach should be continued. Element of deception is present. Don't prescribe your own medicine. Heed competent, professional counsel — and this includes law and medicine. Message will become increasingly clear. Pisces is involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Nothing is halfway or lukewarm for you at this time. Changes occur and your affairs of heart are swelled, bruised, put upon and caressed. Capricorn, Cancer persons are in picture. Take cash and let the credit go!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Are you concerned about security? Don't worry! Your concern is natural especially today. Emphasis is on how you relate to family abd others close to you. You are finishing and starting — you may be on emotional precipice. Aries, Libra could be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Short and sweet — that is the pace and the message for you this day. Leo, Aquarius individuals help you make up your mind. Key is to put ideas on market place. Forces are scattered and people tend to make unreasonable demands on your time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Are you prepared for scrutiny where budget is concerned? That is apt to be a major question. Money and how did it get away — you will be called to account. Thus, have facts, figures at hand. A maternal figure stands up for you. You are well protected.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you can break down fences and run open-field style. People love you and vote for you and popularity zooms. Sagittarius, Gemini persons make standout appearances. Take plunge based on personal feelings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may think you are starting from scratch — but actually past experience will be successfully utilized. A decision, affecting you, is made behind closed doors. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio individuals may be involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, musical, a natural diplomat and psychologist and you draw to you persons born under Libra, Aries and Taurus. You made new starts this year—July was especially significant. You are building for future and it is brighter than you might now imagine it to be. In November your social life accelerates and there also will be opportunity for travel.

Pork Appeals To All

Whether you're cooking for family, guests, or even weightwatchers, put pork on the menu. Tender juicy pork has a distinctive flavor that appeals to all. New developments in the hog industry mean leaner cuts are appearing on the meat counter and this is of particular interest to today's consumers.

The cut and the amount to buy depend largely on the occasion and the budget. Shoulder chops and picnic shoulders are usually a better buy than loin chops and roasts for family meals. When buying pork cuts, compare prices on the basis of cost per serving rather than cost per pound. Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada suggest that one pound of boneless roast will provide three to four servings and one pound of chops or roast with bone will give two to three servings.

"Pork Chop Supper" is perfect for family meals. It combines tender shoulder chops and vegetables with a delicious gravy. Served over noodles or rice, it provides a complete dinner.

PORK CHOP SUPPER

4 1-inch shoulder pork chops (about 3 pounds)
Salt and pepper
2 onions, thinly sliced
1 10-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon caraway seeds
1 10-ounce package frozen mixed vegetables.

Snip fat edge of chops. Cut each chop in 3 pieces. Season with salt and pepper. Rub hot pan with fat cut from chops and brown chops in pan 3 minutes each side. Drain off fat. Top chops with onion slices. Combine soup and milk and pour over chops. Sprinkle with caraway seeds. Cover and simmer until tender (about 35 minutes), turning once. Add vegetables 10 minutes before end of cooking. Six servings.

Good Faith Binds Deserters

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Military deserters in public-service jobs under President Ford's conditional clemency plan would likely face no criminal action if they quit, a military spokesman says.

Marine Corps Lieut. Dale Baird, information officer at the Joint Processing Centre at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indiana, said Tuesday that only "his word of good faith" binds a deserter to his job.

Baird said such persons would not be subject to prosecution but added: "If we get thousands who quit their jobs, something will have to be done."

Baird also said less than one third of the 12,000 deserters eligible for conditional amnesty have indicated an interest in the program. And of the 3,899 calling, only about one-third — 1,327 have surrendered to authorities, he said.

"I look for the big push to come in January," Baird said. "A lot of people in Canada are holding off" to see what treatment is given to those who accept amnesty.

The offer expires Jan. 31. After that, those who refuse the terms face criminal charges.

Craftsmen To Discuss Conflicts

Conflicts faced by craftsmen who sell their wares will be the topic of a discussion Friday night at Circle Craft Co-operative.

"It's intimidating to go into a store and say, 'I made this,' then lay it on the counter like your soul," said Yetta Lees who will speak on craftsmen's problems.

Feelings of failure, isolation because of the solitary nature of the work, insecurity caused by lack of outside authority and the irresponsibility of most jobs and methods of coping with the problems will be discussed.

Friday's session, scheduled for 8 p.m. at 510 Fort, will be the second sponsored by the Co-op.

FILTH FOUND IN TUNA FROM 13 CANNERS

MOUNT VERNON (UPI) — Rodent hairs, moth wings and parts of insects and maggots were found in samples of canned tuna fish from 13 of 16 major distributors or canners tested, according to the Consumers Union.

The Consumers Union, a nonpartisan consumer organization and publisher of Consumers Reports, said Monday it tested 52 brands of canned tuna for color, condition, aroma, flavor, texture, filth and bacteria.

The results of the tests, published in the magazine's November issue, found that while rich in protein, tuna samples also contained "a disturbing number of rodent hairs, other animal hairs, feather fragments, moth scales and insect and maggot parts."

"Of the 16 distributors of tuna whose brands we tested," Consumers Reports said, "13 were represented by at least one filthy sample out of those examined for filth. The pattern of permitting unwholesome adulterants appears industry wide."

The article added, "although the filth we found is more likely to ruin your appetite than your health, we think the tuna industry badly needs a clean up."

Charles R. Carry, executive director of the Tuna Research Foundation, San Pedro, Calif., noting that more than 90 per cent of U.S. tuna is packed in Los Angeles and Puerto Rico responded:

"Chief Inspector Jim Failey, superintendent of the cannery inspection division of the state department of health, will confirm the fact that there are no rodents in California tuna canneries.

"State sanitation programs are conducted on a continuous basis in all plants and company quality assurance people examine every lot of tuna before it is approved for distribution.

"Furthermore, food and drug administration inspectors have never turned up a case of rodent infestation in any U.S. tuna cannery and they inspect them frequently."

Economic Disaster At Italy's Door

By DUSKO DODER

ROME (WP) — A painful awakening has come to most Italians, who, since the end of the Second World War, had become accustomed to a steadily improving standard of living.

An apparently collapsing economy, recurring social conflict and now a new government crisis have led to a resigned acceptance that the quality of life throughout the country will continue its slow downhill slide.

It is now expected that the number of Italians without jobs will reach a record one million this winter.

Even before last winter's energy crisis Italy was beset by serious inflation. Since the oil shortage hit Italy — which must import 85 per cent of its energy — inflation has ballooned to an annual rate of 20 per cent. The drastic increase in energy costs had added a crushing burden to the nation's finances.

These were the recurring themes in scores of interviews and conversations last week with politicians of various parties, trade-union officials, intellectuals and foreign diplomats.

The prevailing mood was summed up by Ugo La Malfa, leader of the Republican party, one of the coalition partners in the Christian Democratic-led centre-left government.

"From the point of view of political will, the centre-left is now dead, disintegrated. The trouble is that there are no viable alternatives."

If Amintore Fanfani, the Christian Democratic leader now trying to form the 37th postwar government, fails, and if powerful organized labor tries to impose its program through social unrest and strikes, Italy may turn to the left and the Communist party may be invited to join the government.

Many Italians still believe that the nation will huddle through its present difficulties, but facts and figures show that the crisis is a serious one that problably cannot be resolved by the old formulas.

In addition to runaway inflation, Italy's balance-of-payments deficit may reach $10 billion, the Bank of Italy is running out of credit in world money markets, and key industries have placed 74,000 workers on a reduced work week.

The energy crisis has hit Italy harder than any other Western country. More than $6 billion of the balance-of-payments deficit is due to oil purchases. The West German government last month extended a $2 billion loan to Italy, but provides only 2½ months of breathing space.

The potential dangers of this difficult autumn are already apparent. Communist-dominated labor unions have already endorsed acts of civil disobedience, and a four-day general strike last week gave the nation a foretaste of things to come.

In Lombardy and Piedmont, workers have been refusing to pay increased fares for public transport. In Naples, unemployed workers have occupied public buildings, and residents of publicly subsidized housing have reduced their own rents to protest ever-increasing prices.

Organized labor has warned the government that it will not accept a lowering of the workers' standard of living while the middle and upper classes are engaged in conspicuous consumption.

GOP Snubs, Empty Plates Greet Ford

CLEVELAND (WP) — President Ford charged Tuesday that peace could be jeopardized "if we get the wrong kind of Congress" in this year's election.

In campaign speeches in Okalahoma and Ohio, the President also said that a Democratic sweep could result in the election of "extremists" who might undermine the two-party system.

The president's uphill battle to salvage as much as possible for Republican candidates became more desperate as he encountered new and discouraging odds in these two normally conservative states.

Former Ohio Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes, the party's nominee for governor, who has criticzed the president's call for an income tax surcharge, failed to show up for Tuesday night's rally, a snub of unusual proportions. A Rhodes spokesman said he had a previous campaign schedule in Batavia.

Earlier, in Okalahoma City, the president read a poll published in Tuesday's Daily Okalahoman reporting that Republican candidates for governor and senator are substantially behind their Democratic opponents just two weeks before the voters go to the polls.

In his address before a Republican rally in Oklahoma City's convention hall, the President said he was "pleading with you to give America — not to me—a Congress" that will co-operate on domestic and foreign issues.

The hall was less than three-fourths full at the noon hours. Earlier, the President addressed a $500 a plate fund-raising breakfast in Oklahoma City which 59 per sons paid to attend.

Tuesday's tepid receptions were in marked contrast to the enthusiastic welcome Ford received Monday in two Mexican cities he visited with Mexican President Luis Eccheveria.

Three hundred persons paid $500 each to hear Ford plead Tuesday night for a heavy Republican turnout in the Buckeye state.

The plea for election of Republicans to Congress to help preserve the peace was reminiscent of President Woodrow Wilson's call in 1918 for the election of a Democratic Congress to help him win the war—a call which boomeranged against him.

When press secretary Ron Nessen was asked for clarification of the President's comments about a "wrong kind of Congress," he told newsmen that Ford had not talked with Secretary of State Henry A. Kisssinger Tuesday and "was thinking particularly of the continuing resolution . . . aid to Turkey."

Mormons To Disclose Race Policy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The president of the Mormon church has been subpoenaed to reveal all church policies and practices concerning blacks, who are denied full participation in the 3.3-million-member religion.

Lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) subpoenaed President Spencer Kimball, 79, leader of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon), to appear Nov. 14 to give a deposition in a federal court suit against the Boy Scouts of America.

The church's ban of blacks from its lay priesthood—held by all faithful, non-black, male members 12 or older—is at the root of an NAACP racial-discrimination lawsuit filed in July against the scouts.

The NAACP, along with two 12-year-old black scouts and their guardians, charge the Boy Scouts with discriminating against blacks by denying them top leadership positions in Mormon-sponsored troops.

The subpoena orders Kimball to produce all "writings in your possession or the possession of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints respecting every policy and practice of said church regarding persons of the black race and to permit inspection and copying thereof."

Tax Committee Nears Deadline

SANFORD
. . . complex problems

The legislature's taxation committee wound up two days of closed door talks Tuesday but still hasn't completed its report on real property taxes in B.C.

Committee members will meet again Monday to hammer out final details of the report, which must be completed by Nov. 1 when the legislature begins its fall sitting.

Committee members will meet again Monday to hammer out final details of the report, which must be completed by Nov. 1 when the legislature begins its fall sitting.

The all-party committee was assigned the task last spring of recommending a tax policy for B.C. to work in conjunction with legislation setting assessments on all property at 100 per cent of value.

Public hearings on taxation are held around the province this month by the committee but two-day session this week marked the first time the group had sat down to discuss the briefs presented during the tour by individuals and interested groups.

Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) said she didn't really expect the committee to complete tne report in just two days in view of "complexity of the problems" and most of the time was spent tossing ideas around.

But said she expects the committee will have no difficulty preparing its report before the deadline.

The committee is faced with the problem of finding a solution before the end of the year in order to prevent the "chaos" they have been warned will occur if the 100 per cent assessments are established without accompanying new tax measures.

The committee may recommend some kind of stop-gap measure to ensure there are no major shifts in taxation next year and decide more thorough investigation is needed before permanent changes in taxation are established.

Premier Barrett has promissed whatever the committee recommends, homeowners will suffer no great change in their tax loads next year.

Kent State Jurors Chosen

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Twelve jurors were tentatively chosen Tuesay in the trial of eight former Ohio national guardsmen indicted in the killing of four Kent State University students and the wounding of nine others during anti-war protests on May 4, 1970.

Attorneys may challenge the 12 today and alternate jurors could be picked. Opening arguments in the case would begin after jury selection was completed.

Chief U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti, in an effort to speed-up jury selection, took over the questioning of prospective jurors Tuesday.

Previously, each prospect had been questioned by chief government lawyer Robert Murphy, head of the civil rights division of the justice department, and the three defence attorneys, C. D. Lambros, Bernard Stuplinski and E. K. Wright.

Lambros represents defendants James Pierce, Ralph Zoller, Barry Norris and James McGee; Stuplinski represents Matthew McManus, Lawrence Shafer and William Perkins; and Wright is counsel for Leon Smith.

Pierce, Perkins, Zoller, McGee and Shafer face maximum sentences of life imprisonment if convicted in the deaths of four students. Smith, McManus and Morris could be sentenced to up to one year in prison and fined up to $1,000 if convicted.

Earlier, Battisti criticized certain news reports, one for being possibly prejudicial and the others for being based on material from out of court.

"I would like the press to keep in mind that the spirit of my remarks is to avoid prejudicing the case of either the government or the defence," he said.

"We are all aware of the problems that exist through the constitutional rights of free speech and a free press and a fair trial."

BRITONS TOP LIST OF NEW CITIZENS

OTTAWA (CP) — Former citizens of the United Kingdom again far outnumbered emigrants from other countries last year in adopting Canadian citizenship, figures released Tuesday by Statistics Canada show.

Of the 104,697 naturalized during last year, 25.8 per cent were former U.K. citizens. Italy was second with 12.7 per cent.

The U.S. ranked sixth with 3.2 per cent and China seventh with 3.1 per cent. In 1972, when 80,866 were naturalized, three per cent came from the U.S. and 3.4 per cent from China.

The U.K. proportion of 25.8 per cent in 1973 was up from 23 per cent in 1972 while the 12.7 per cent from Italy was down from 14.3 per cent in 1972.

Third last year was Germany with five per cent, the same as in 1972; fourth was Greece with 4.8 per cent, down from 5.4 per cent the year before; and fifth was Yugoslavia with 4.7 per cent, up from four per cent in 1972.

Emigrants from Commonwealth countries accounted for 36.9 per cent of the 1973 total and European countries, excluding the U.K., accounted for 46.2 per cent.

100 Naked Youths Loosed from Jails

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil (Reuter) — Nearly 100 naked juvenile delinquents, stripped and set loose by Brazilian police, have been raiding houses, shops and restaurants for food and clothing, even stealing curtains to cover themselves, local authorities say.

The boys, aged 11 to 17, were taken from cells during the weekend by police in Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city. They were stripped and set loose just across the border in neighboring Minas Gerais state, where authorities have asked the federal justice minister to open an inquiry.

Forty-one of the famished youths were picked up by local authorities, who gave them clothing before shipping them back to Sao Paulo.

Local police are hunting the others, who have been holding up cars, trucks and stores in search of food and clothing.

Economy Screw Twisted On 'Elite' Armed Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — The armed forces have been rung down to dead-slow for the next few months while the government decides on how and where to cut costs, informed sources say.

All but the essential operations have been cancelled, meaning that ships will spend more time than usual at the dock, planes on the ground and trucks in the parking lot.

Exercises scheduled for as far south as the Caribbean and as far north as the Arctic Circle, among others, have been cancelled as the forces attempt to live with an inflation-hit budget.

As described by one informed source, the situation at least until next April will see men sittng out looking at equipment they cannot use because of costs while wondering if modernization will ever get off the ground.

It is known that when elements of the Canadian Airborne Regiment return to Edmonton from Cyprus in December, they will not even be allowed to practise parachute jumping.

Aircraft and ships will be used to a minimum commensurate with safety. Air crews must spend a minimum time in the air and engines, to be kept up to efficiency must be used.

Meanwhile, spending on such things as replacement for aged trucks, some of which have been rattling around for 20 years, has been deferred along with other equipment.

And hiring of causual civiliam labor, about 8,000 persons a year usually, is to be drastically cut to reduce spending.

The squeeze is on until the government brings down its budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year, beginning next April.

By that time the government will have decided how much money it is willing to spend in maintaining an "elite" force that Defence Minister James Richardson says must be cut in size but be well equipped. The government must decide which military tasks can be reduced so that this smaller force can operate effectively.

DEXTRAZE

RICHARDSON

Some sources almost wince when they discuss how far the economy screw is being twisted. They say even reserve fuel tanks may be partly empty by the end of the winter. They add that there is no way the forces can operate in such a restricted fashion much past April.

The squeeze is the result of $98 million in cost-cutting instituted by Gen. J. A. Dextraze, chief of defence staff, as he bought the government time to work out an economy program.

The government allowed this year's defence expenditures to rise to about $2.5 billion from about $2.36 billion but some of that increase had to go to a $500-a-year inflation allowance that public servants and the military received in the spring.

The way it is explained by some sources, the military was warning the government early this year that it was heading for financial trouble because of inflation. The government, with a minority Parliament and an impending election, took no concrete action.

They say Gen. Dextraze took what apparently was unilateral action in allowing the size of the forces to drop about 3,000 below authorized strength as an economy device.

But these sources say Richardson virtually pulled the rug from under the general by making permanent what the general had planned as a temporary measure.

The general planned to rebuild his forces — this was shown in a letter he wrote to his troops in September — with an overhauled recruiting system he had ordered instituted.

In October, Richardson lowered the boom. He said the forces must be better equipped and smaller and recruitment would be allowed to lag. He acknowledged that they were overworked now because of personnel shortages and that tasking would have to be reduced. He said the cabinet was considering what tasks must go.

The authorized level of the forces is in excess of 83,000. But generally about 1,500 of these are not counted as being part of the effective strength of the forces.

Today the forces are down to slightly more than 78,000. Richardson has said for the rest of this year the size will be allowed to be in the 78,500-79,500 area. He has said 83,000 is not a magic number that must be adhered to.

Richardson has indicated that he sees the job of cabinet as pruning a litttle from the military's basic tasks of internal security, defence of North America, NATO and peacekeeping.

He has said he would like to bring home a few hundred Canadians from Cyprus, an action sources say would have little meaningful effect on the military economic situation.

Housing Approved

Three condominiums were approved by Esquimalt planning committee Monday for a property west of MaCaulay East apartments on the north side of Esquimalt Road.

E. Y. Construction will build one 60-unit condominium and two 30-unit condominiums on the site, each about three storeys high.

Municipal engineer Mack Campbell said the company will apply for a building permit and start construction soon.

ESKIMO ART: OCEAN VITAL PART

WINNIPEG (CP) — There may be more in Eskimo carvings than meet the eye.

Marsha Twomey is a young worker at the Winnipeg Art Gallery who has been devising ways to catalogue its more-than 45,000 carvings. The largest part of the collection, the largest in the country, was given to the gallery by Miss Twomey's father, botanist J. F. Twomey.

By working so closely with the ivory and soapstone carvings, Miss Twomey has developed a strong insight into Eskimo art.

The Winnipeg gallery currently has on public display a special selection on the Twomey collection, called Swimming Forms. The element that draws the works together is that each piece supposes the existence of a water line.

The pieces depict Eskimo huntsmen with kayaks, seals, bears, and waterfowl floating on the open ocean, or emerging from it.

Miss Twomey said in an interview that people looking at Eskimo sculpture casually may be too prone to think of the bottom line of the work simply as a base.

If they were to imagine the base as being the surface of the sea, she said, there might be an entirely new concept of what the artist intended in his work.

She cited one sculpture by Timothy Kutchaka of Port Harrison, in northern Quebec, which seems to depict two Eskimos in parkas dancing, or perhaps jostling. But when viewed in the proper context, one is obviously pulling the other out of the sea onto an ice floe.

Miss Twomey said the sea plays such an important part in the life of the Eskimo that it must form a vital part of Eskimo art.

There are more than 3,800 pieces of Eskimo carving in the Twomey collection, gathered by her father between 1952 and 1972.

She said her father, a plantgeneticist now living in California, is still collecting Eskimo art.

In the current show here, there are 45 sculptures selected from the Twomey collection, along with six small ivories loaned by the National Museum of Canada. These date from the Thule culture, between 1000 and 1500 A.D., and are miniatures, each about one inch long.

Young Israeli Confounds Science —Is He Psychic or a Magician?

By BERNARD NOSSITER

LONDON (WP) — Does Uri Geller possess psychic powers or is he merely a clever sleight-of-hand artist?

Two leading scientific journals here offer opposing conclusions about the young Israeli.

Nature carries a report by two physicists at the Stanford Research Institute whose experiments conclude that Geller has at least some of the power he claims. The magazine, which has an international reputation, carefully disassociates itself from the findings and says it is carrying the report to spur more inquiry.

Skeptical

New Scientist, another respected journal, publishes a skeptical article by another physicist who demonstrates how Geller could have tricked the Stanford investigators with miniature radios. He concludes, "Uri Geller is simply a good magician."

The Stanford experiment was conducted by Russell Targ and Harold Puthoff. Targ is a former president of the Parapsychology Research Group of Palo Alto and the inventor of an "extra-sensory perception teaching machine." Both are laser physicists.

Their most elaborate test put Geller in an "electrically shielded room" and called on him to produce simple drawings made in another room.

Random Words

The first four "target" drawings for Geller to match were dictated by words picked at random from a dictionary. All are printed in the Nature article and a layman might conclude that the misses and hits are about even.

Geller reproduced with remarkable fidelity a bunch of 24 grapes, offers a horse for a camel and some abstract squiggles for a firecracker and a devil with a pitchfork.

Another set of three were drawn by a computer and again Geller's production is mixed. He drew a box with diagonal lines for a kite, a plausible abstraction for a church and an arrow in a box for a heart pierced with an arrow.

The experimenters report, however that Geller declined to reproduce pictures drawn in advance and concealed in envelopes behind black cardboard. In other words, he could not draw when the "target" was unknown to an experimenter.

Perfect Match

Targ and Puthoff gave 10 Geller drawings and 10 targets to a pair of judges. They matched them perfectly. The scientists calculate that the odds against this happening by chance are three in 10 million.

In a second and simpler test, Geller demonstrated to the researchers' satisfaction that he could "see" hidden objects unknown to the experimenter. In scientific jargon, this is a "double blind" test.

A dice cube has put in a steel box and the box shaken vigorously. Geller was asked to describe the topmost face and did so eight times out of eight. Here the probability of eight consecutive chance guesses was put at one in a million.

From these and other experiments with persons who have not enjoyed Geller's televised notoriety, Targ and Puthoff concluded: "A channel exists whereby information about a remote location can be obtained by means of an as yet unidentified perceptual modality."

Nature editor David Davies expressed it more simply: "Some people can read thoughts or see things remotely."

Read Thoughts

In an introductory editorial, Davies warns that the Targ-Puthoff paper was shown to three scientific referees who split evenly over whether the report deserved publication. One favored it, one opposed it and a third "did not feel strongly either way."

All three, however, agreed "that details given as to the precise way in which the experiment was carried out were disconcertingly vague." The referees were especially troubled by the lack of detail about safeguards against fraud, conscious or unconscious.

However, editor Davies said he is publishing the document by "two qualified scientists, writing from a major research establishment apparently with the unqualified backing of the Research Institute itself."

Accepts Challenge

This challenge was picked up by Joseph Hanlon, another physicist, writing in New Scientist. He notes that the Stanford researchers do not report on any of the stunts with which Geller has enthralled television audiences on both sides of the Atlantic — bending seemingly by his mental powers, keys, spoons and other metal, stopping watches and the like.

Hanlon also offers a theory explaining how Geller may have fooled the researchers over the drawings and the dice. He recalls that Geller was discovered in Israel and brought to the United States by Dr. Andrija Henry Puharich. He holds 56 patents in the field of medical electronics, including one for a miniature receiver small enough to fit under a tooth.

Hanlon examines Geller's drawings and concludes that all of them, including the abstractions, would fit a verbal description of the "targets" — they were supposed to reproduce.

Small Radio

He quotes Robert King, a lecturer in the department of electrical engineering at London's Imperial College, who contends that electrically shielded rooms are not designed to prevent secret attempts to transmit radioed information.

From this, Hanlon argues that Geller could have taken a Puharich miniature radio into the shielded room and received information about the targets" drawings, either from an associate or from the unwitting conversation of experimeters in the remote room fitted out with a bug.

What about the "double blind" experiment with the dice? Hanlon says that the professional magicians can buy for about $70 dice equipped with a transmitter that reports which face is showing. "It would not have been too difficult for Uri," Hanlon says, to pull a "switch," substituting the radio dice for the experimenter's dice.

The best test of any experiment, says Hanlon, is the ability of other scientists to repeat it. Geller, however, "has backed out on a written commitment to work with the New Scientist."

"It seems clear," he writes, "that no matter how good they are as laser physicists, Russel Targ and Dr. Hal Puthoff are not match for Uri Geller . . . there is too much evidence that they missed out on important points."

In science, Hanlon says, the simplest explanation is best. "The SRI paper simply does not stand up against the mass of circumstancial evidence that Uri Geller is simply a good magician."

School Bombed In Protest

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — An elementary school was bombed Tuesday as new violence flared in Kanawha County's seven-week textbook protest.

The bombing occurred less than a day after a presidential aide announced that the White House was seeking a "constructive compromise" to end violence that has included several shootings.

A stick of dynamite thrown before dawn through a window of Midway Elementary caused an estimated $1,500 damage to one room, officials said. The school was opened for classes Tuesday, but no pupils attended.

Another room in the same school was damaged Oct. 9 by a fire bomb.

The protesters, led by a small group of fundamentalist ministers, are attempting to force the county board of education to remove from the classrooms books they consider detrimental to the morals and religious beliefs of their children.

HONDA CIVIC

IN A WORLD OF SHORTAGES

GET SOMETHING THAT USES LESS

Each year, several million new cars take to the road.

Their owners are forced to compete for space. Because while millions upon millions of cars are pouring out of factories, land is not.

What is happening is: more and more cars are chasing fewer and fewer spaces. This is madness.

Out of this chaos will emerge a tough new breed of car. Honda Civic is the first of this kind in North America.

So modestly sized outside that three Honda Civics can fit in the space taken up by two standard sized cars.

A Honda Civic can snap up a space so tight, an ordinary car owner must weep with frustration.

At the same time, a Honda Civic will carry four adults in comfort. An August 1974 study by Road and Track magazine found Honda Civic took up the smallest road area of any car surveyed. Yet, it came out ahead in space-using and weight efficiency.

When you manoeuvre back and forth into a Civic-sized parking space, your mind is at peace. Because the Civic ends where it appears to end. This makes for much friendlier feelings between you and your neighbours. Not to mention your insurance company and theirs.

No Real Excuse for Failure on Detente

By PETER OSNOS

MOSCOW (WP) — The arrival of U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in Moscow this evening opens a particularly delicate phase in the attempts to force a genuine detente between the two superpowers, in the opinion of Soviet sources and senior Western diplomats.

Kissinger's talks with Kremlin leaders will focus on strategic arms limitations, as they have on most of his previous visits to the Soviet capital. But for the first time since negotiations began on the second round of SALT more than 18 months ago, neither side has any real excuse for delaying further progress on the all-important arms issues, Soviets and diplomats agreed in interviews over the past few days.

The reasoning is simple: with Watergate and former president Nixon's political vulnerability no longer a factor, and with the matter of trade benefits for the Soviets and emigration finally resolved, no obstacles remain to hard bargaining on nuclear controls — if the will exists in Moscow and Washington.

There is no mistaking the sense here that a time of reckoning for detente may be close at hand. "It has taken a while," said one well-informed American source, "but the way has been cleared. We have had a lot of talk about serious talk, but so far no detectible movement. If this try falls, then there is likely to be a long hard look on both sides."

Without some kind of breakthrough soon on limiting offensive strategic weapons, the feeling is that other aspects of the Soviet-American relationship will begin to look threadbare. By this figuring, immumerable agreements on artificial heart research and housing construction have little meaning unless there is also advancement toward the principal objective of detente — curbing the missile race.

Details of proposals Kissinger may be carrying from Washington and possible Soviet responses are not available here. Soviet statements and press commentaries on the regular SALT negotiations resumed in Geneva last month never go beyond generalities.

But one possible hint of the Soviet line so far is that negotiations begun in Moscow two weeks ago on underground nuclear testing are already being described by knowledgeable Americans as "sure to be long and drawn out." These talks are aimed at extending the pact on underground tests reached at last June's summit session to include peaceful testing.

The original ban applied to explosions of over 150 kilotons (equivalent to 150,000 tons of TNT), but the Ford administration reportedly recognized that unless peaceful explosions were also covered, the treaty would not be ratified by the Senate.

Having agreed to the earlier pact, Western diplomats say, the Kremlin should eventually go along with this broader arrangement, although apparently not for some time.

Despite the prospect of difficulties ahead, Kissinger's reception in Moscow this week is certain to be warm. After a cautious waiting period, the Soviets have let it be known publicly and privately that they are pleased with the policy outlines of the Ford administration.

Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's two-days of talks with the president in Washington last month, Soviet sources said, reassured the Kremlin of Ford's basic commitment to detente. Notwithstanding the furor over Ford's pardon of Nixon, the Soviets now also believe that Watergate and its political implications are a thing of the past.

It was the success of the Gromyko-Ford talks, sources said, that led to the Soviet suggestion for a summit meeting before the end of year between the president and Communist Party Leader Leonid Brezhnev. Such a summit, it was thought, would recapture some of the momentum of Soviet-American relations lost in the last stages of Nixon's troubles and because of the trade and emigration dispute.

Washington's reluctance to go ahead with the summit, U.S. sources here indicate, reflects a wariness of the Soviet tendency to stress atmospherics in the relationship while the arms issues remain close to deadlock.

That would explain the president's comment at his press conference Oct. 9 that a summit would be in order this year "if there is a reason."

From the Soviet standpoint, the Kremlin has only just made a fundamental concession on a matter of great importance: the right to emigration. By pledging to allow some 60,000 Jews and other minorities to leave the country each year, the Soviets say, they have shown how far they are prepared to go to improve ties with the United States.

At a press conference Monday, Nikolai Knozentsev, vice chairman of Soviet Gosplan (the state planning committee) listed Moscow's developing trade relationship with a number of Western countries, but only spoke of the problems of doing business with the United States up to now.

In their belief that tangible progress is needed on nuclear controls to preserve detente, Western analysts do not minimize the substantial technical discrepencies that would have to be worked out in fashioning the 10-year accord that is now the goal of the SALT talks.

Technical questions can be settled, these Western sources say, if they are really only technical.

KISSINGER

Already Broken?

MOSCOW (UPI) — Jewish dissidents say the Soviet Union is already breaking a five-day-old agreement with the United States to relax emigration restrictions.

The dissidents said Tuesday the Soviet Union, in defiance of the accord, is still harassing and threatening Jews trying to leave the country for Israel.

Three Jews staging a hunger strike said their phone wires were cut. The wife of a scientist said the government threatened to jail her husband. A Soviet professor said officials plan new persecutions of Jews.

U.S. and Soviet officials signed an agreement last Friday to ease the Kremlin's stringent emigration laws in exchange for U.S. trade benefits.

The pact calls for the Soviet Union to refrain from punitive actions or "unreasonable" impediments against citizens wanting to leave the country.

IRA ARMS CAPTURED

BELFAST (UPI) The British Army announced today it has captured a two-truck arms convoy rumbling through Belfast in a move it said dealt a major blow to the outlawed Irish Republican Army forces in Northern Ireland.

"It represents one of the biggest coups we have had so far against the IRA," an officer said.

The war material was found in the back of the trucks after they were stopped Tuesday night in the Springfield Road area. It included three mortars, 28 mortar rounds, three sub-machine guns, 3,500 bullets, 18 primed incendiaries and a sizeable amount of explosives.

Police said 11 men were arrested in the vicinity of the trucks. Six were later released, but at least four of the remaining five will be charged in connection with the arms, they said.

The officers speculated that the weapons and ammunition were being moved from one Catholic area to another inside the city when they were intercepted by soldiers.

The discovery of the trucks coincided with the opening of a major security operation by police and soldiers to protect Catholic neighborhoods from roving Protestant militants.

These gunmen have killed more than 15 Catholics and wounded dozens of others in the past month.

The latest victim was Dominic Donnelly, a tramp killed Tuesday by a bomb concealed in a transistor radio he had been given at a local betting shop. A clerk in the shop that caters to Catholics said he gave Donnelly the radio after he found it behind a counter and no one claimed it.

"Dominic said he could trade the radio for a couple of bottles of wine," a friend said.

Donnelly had barely emerged from the betting shop into the street, clutching the radio, when it exploded in his hands.

The blast blew him to pieces and tore an arm off a teenage passerby.

An army spokesman said a 21-year-old lieutenant died Wednesday from wounds suffered in a Londonderry sniping attack three weeks ago.

Seaplane Dodging

Victoria seaplane pilot James Douglas said Tuesday he was turning to avoid colliding with an oncoming airplane when his Victoria Flying Services floatplane tipped over in Vancouver's Coal Harbor.

Douglas and passengers Marnie Jarman of Burnaby and Chris Bergthorson of Mayne Island escaped from the slowly-sinking Cessna 180 without serious injury.

"Just as we touched down I saw a twin-engined Otter straight ahead," Douglas said. "It was evident I was going to hit him so I turned as sharply as I could. The float dug in, a wing tip hit the water and over we went."

Meningitis Epidemic Kills 2,000 in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (WP) — Brazil's meningitis epidemic, which authorities thought had reached its peak a couple of months ago, continues at a disastrous pace. The military-run government finally is beginning to admit the seriousness of the situation, but it still won't say how many people have died from the disease.

Reliable estimates place the death toll for the year at over 2,000.

The 1975 Pan American Games, scheduled to be held in Sao Paulo were ordered transferred to another country because of the epidemic. And in Rio, tourism and health officials are worried that meningitis will be a problem during next February's famous Carnival celebrations.

The government hopes to vaccinate 59 million Brazilians against meningitis by the end of next year. That's nearly three-fifths of this South American country's total population.

The 2,000 figure coincides, however, with an on-the-record statement the health minister made in Congress in August, saying there had been 10,372 cases of meningitis since January and that during the worst phase of the epidemic the fatality rate was 15 per cent.

Dr. Carlos de Oliveira Bastos, director of Sao Paulo's Emilio Ribas Hospital, a major treatment centre for meningitis, said in an interview with a Brazilian medical journal that many of the victims of the current epidemic are babies less than one year old. And visits to public hospitals and clinics indicate that most of the people coming down with meningitis in Brazil are from urban slums.

One Brazilian doctor who agreed to talk to a foreign correspondent on the condition that his name not be used said that the potential of a meningitis epidemic has existed in Brazil for years, "and you can't really blame the current outbreak on anything specific."

The doctor admitted that the much-criticized Brazilian federal health system ideally should be doing a better job. He said that the present government policy of mass vaccinations, combined with efforts to treat proven meningitis cases as fast as possible, "is better than nothing."

Meningitis, which can be transmitted like a cold, attacks the membranes surrounding the brain and spinal cord. Symptoms include fever, an excruciating headache and a stiff neck. If treatment — with penicillin-based antibiotics — is not given within 24 hours, the next step frequently is death.

"This year we lost the war against meningitis because of a lack of vaccine," Health Minister Paulo Almeida Nachado declared.

"We've done everything possible," he added, "but we're in an undomvortable defensive position. Meningitis vaccine still is not produced on a large scale." Brazil must import its vaccine from France and the U.S.

It is nearly impossible to get accurate fatality figures. Doctors here are under orders not to talk to newsmen about meningitis. And when Brazilian reporters make efforts at calculating the total of deaths, federal police censors usually cut the figures out of the stories

A leading Rio newspaper reported in mid October, however, that Nachado had told a closed meeting of state health secretaries that some 20,000 Brazilians had come down with meningitis since the first of the year and that more than 2,000 had died. The Washington Post asked the federal health ministry if that report was correct, and the reply was: "We are not authorized to give out any information on this subject."

Symphony in Red Despite Cuts

Cutting production expenses in certain areas and an increase in revenues in others has reduced Victoria Symphony's estimated 1974-75 budget deficit of $24,352 by $8,792.

However, the deficit remaining from the previous season will still mean a probable total deficit at the end of the current season of between $30,000 and $40,000.

At a meeting Tuesday, board members discussed solutions, including ways to dispose of $50,000 worth of unsold tickets for symphony season and special attractions.

Season tickets are still being sold, reported marketing chairman Cmdr. John Hall. The total of season sales to date is $110,603, he said.

Agreement was reached to seek professional assistance in promotion and sales. On a motion of Murray Adaskin it was decided that Canada Council should be approached to make available the services of international expert Danny Newsman.

"It would be a tragedy," he said, "if we allowed this orchestra which is now undoubtedly among the very finest in Canada, to go under for lack of proper handling of these matters."

Symphony president Miss M. E. Ronahan emphasized that all board members must be prepared to co-operate fully with all suggestions and advice from a professional source.

Music Director Laszlo Gati was authorized to proceed with the engaging of guest artists for the 1975-76 season.

Gas Suspected

LA RONGE, Sask. (CP) Coroner Dr. Ed Weins said Monday he is almost certain carbon monoxide poisoning was the cause of the thanksgiving weekend deaths of three persons at a cabin near here.

Dr. Weins said he is still waiting for more information but autopsy results have shown 50 to 60 per cent carboxyhemoglobin content in the victims' blood and other tests showed that a gas-burning refrigerator in the cabin was producing lethal levels of carbon monoxide gas.

The victims were William George Stothers, 64, of Shawinigan Lake, Patrick Stothers, 14, of Regina, and Donald Thomson, 14, of Saskatoon.

UNICEF FUNDS HALLOWEEN AIM

More than just candy kisses were collected by trick-or-treaters last Halloween.

Canadian children were given $856,000 for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund last year when they rattled their UNICEF boxes Halloween night.

"People in our beautiful, comfortable city do care about those less fortunate than themselves," said Victoria UNICEF organizer Margaret Hanes.

Money collected goes to projects in underdeveloped countries UNICEF aims to help towards self-sufficiency.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal was played, our South declarer made use of a deceptive play that is as old as the hills. Had our West defender been on his toes, South would not have gotten away with his chicanery. The fact is, however, West wasn't, and South did.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♦.

Dummy's jack of diamonds was put up on the opening lead, East played the deuce, and South captured the trick with — his queen! This play was designed to create in West's mind the "fact" that declarer had been dealt the doubleton A-Q of diamonds.

Then ten of hearts was then led to the board's jack, after which the queen of clubs was led and the finesse taken. West's king won the trick.

Convinced that South had the singleton ace of diamonds remaining — why else would he have overtaken the diamond jack at trick one? — West returned a low diamond at trick four to drive out South's ace. The trick was captured by the board's nine. Declarer now claimed ten tricks.

From declarer's point of view, his overtaking of the diamond jack with his queen could cost, at most, an over-trick: if East possessed the club king, then by repeated finesses South would bring home five club tricks, plus three hearts and two diamonds.

Had declarer permitted dummy's jack of diamonds to have won the opening lead, West would have discontinued playing diamonds, since he would then have known that South had the A-Q remaining. In all probability, he would then have shifted to spades, and the defenders would have cashed five spade tricks.

Actually, after winning his club king, West should have laid down the spade ace, and then continued with his remaining spade. The reason? Well, South's opening one no-trump bid showed exactly 16-18 points. South was known to have the A-Q of diamonds, the ace of clubs (he was finessing the queen), and the A-K of hearts (dummy's jack had captured trick two). Thus 17 of South's points were accounted for; and South, therefore, couldn't have either the queen or king of spades.

Diplomas To Eight Victorians

Eight Greater Victoria residents are among 19 civil servants to receive public administration diplomas Oct. 25 after completing a three-year executive development program at University of Victoria.

The diplomas will be granted at a special academic assembly at 4 p.m. in the University gymnasium officiated by Chancellor Robert T. Wallace.

Australia Now Recruits Asians

By THOMAS KENT

SYDNEY (AP) — After decades of a "white Australia" immigration policy, Australia is not only accepting Asian workers now but paying for them to come here.

Australian technical missions soon will fan out through Asia, evaluating technical training programs to help immigration officers select blue-collar Asians who can contribute to the Australian economy.

Those selected will receive travel and resettlement subsidies if they need them—the first time that substantial numbers of Asians will be eligible for the kind of financial help received for years by immigrants from mainly white countries.

The effect of the missions will be to increase the proportion of blue-collar Asian immigrants and to advance further the Labor government's campaign to end racism in immigration procedures and make individual merit the only yardstick for migrants.

The total number of immigrants accepted each year is likely to keep declining, however, as job vacancies in Australia get scarcer.

The first group of subsidized blue-collar Asians began arriving from the Philippines Aug. 21. Their number will reach 100 by the end of November.

WAGES MUCH HIGHER

"I came to see Australian technology work and also to earn a better living," said Antonio Rodrigues, one of the first Filipinos to arrive. Within days, he had a job as an auto mechanic.

Bernadito Blacaflor, who immigrated along with his wife and their three-year-old daughter, is also a mechanic and says he is contented with his job.

"The supervisor helps me with directions and if I work overtime he gives me a ride home," he said. "I have never experienced that in my home country." The Filipino immigrants can expect basic wages in Australia of about $170 a week, compared to $23 a month at home.

A spokesman for the department of labor and immigration in Canberra said technical missions soon will "go right round the line of Asian countries." A similar mission is at work in Latin America.

The blue-collar workers will join a substantial Asian community already in Australia despite the color bars of the past. In 1971 there were 167,000 Asian-born residents out of a total population of 12.7 million, many of them doctors, scientists and other professionals who paid their own way.

STUDENTS REMAIN

There are second—and third—generation Asians as well, and many of the thousands of Asian students studying at Australian universities remain in the country after completing their education.

Although Prime Minister Gough Whitlam and the Labor government put the axe to the white-Australia policy with unprecedented enthusiasm, the policy had in fact been ebbing away for years.

More of an attitude than a law, it sprang up after the Australian gold rushes of the 19th century attracted thousands of Chinese laborers whom white Australians perceived as threats to their jobs and racial homogeneity.

It continued until well after the Second World War, when the Australians decided to admit 10,000 non-Europeans and people of mixed blood every year—with no financial aid.

Whitlam announced the end of the white-Australia policy in January 1973.

The admission of a substantial proportion of Asian blue-collar workers with financial aid will eliminate the last formal distinctions between white and Asian immigrants.

UNEMPLOYMENT RISING

But immigration officials are quick to warn that the number of blue-collar Asians may not increase substantially unless total immigration quotas are lifted.

The government is admitting 80,000 immigrants in 1974 compared with 110,000 in 1973, 140,000 in 1972 and 170,000 in 1971. The quota for next near has not been announced.

Reliable sources said it is likely to remain low because of increased unemployment and pressure for low quotas from the powerful trade unions.

At the end of August, the seasonally adjusted unemployed rate was 110,891 of a work force of 5.9 million. The unemployed figure was 81,994 a year ago.

VOLVO USES ROBOTS

By JOHN CHADWICK

SKOEVDE, Sweden (Reuter) — Robots outnumber human beings at the new Volvo plant here by 400 to 60 and do the hard work leaving the humans free to decide output.

With uncanny precision, the waist-high red robots pick up a car engine block, move silently off to the first section of the assembly area and stop by the side of the worker.

After a few twists and turns of power tools as further parts are fitted, the robot moves on with a flick of the starting handle to the next point.

When assembly is completed the robot glides off with the finished engine into the testing shop, where it selects the first vacant test position and stops there.

Afterwards, it makes its way back through the maze of machines to the starting point and joins the line of robots waiting their turn to pick up another engine block.

The secret of the precise movements is the robot's electronic "brain" and a system of magnetic tracks built into the floor.

REMOVE DRUDGERY

Volvo, Sweden's biggest exporters, developed the machines at a cost of about $2,000 each as a way of taking the drudgery out of assembly-line labor.

Men and women hold 50 per cent of each of the jobs in this assembly shop, another stage in the Swedes' search for the perfect working environment.

The workers, many of them immigrants Finns and Yugoslavs, work in pastel-shaded surroundings. Large picture windows look out on to well-trimmed lawns and soundproofed rest rooms are furnished in modern Scandinavian style.

This whole plant was planned in close co-operation between bosses and the factory floor.

The workers collectively decide what level of production to aim for and can vary the pace at different times of day. The plant is assembling 480 engines a day and management is satisfied.

The workers have two spokesmen — one man, one woman — to relay any complaints to the management. One of them is 21-year-old Leena Rokkimainen, a Finnish girl who came to Sweden four years ago and now earns about $500 a month.

Ski Tests

LONDON (CP) — A wind tunnel used to study the flying characteristics of aircraft has been helping members of Britain's ski team to improve their performance. Dressed in full ski kit, team members have faced winds of more than 55 m.p.h. in a tunnel at Britain's Royal aircraft establishment at Farnborough. The aim has been to reduce the drag of their bodies.

Rock Wall Challenge: Be Thorough

A rock wall already constructed is more difficult to plant than one in the process of being built. The ideal way of getting plants to behave as though they literally grow out of the wall is to put them in at each layer, adding the rocks over the roots.

Since the gardeners who do this obviously know all about rock plants, it will be those acquiring a wall with a newly purchased property who will need ideas.

Ideally the wall should slope backwards a little so that each piece of rock will have a tiny ledge at its front base. If plants have already inhabited the wall it should be closely inspected for anything of value remaining.

A stepladder or extension ladder may be needed to reach parts of the wall. Take up with you a small pointed trowel, like a putty trowel, and a flat basket with a handle to be hooked on the ladder in front of you. Into it will go plant pieces you wnat to identify when you get down. Secateurs may be handy up there too.

With the putty trowel, clean out anything you know to be out of place in a rock wall. You may find holly, oak, and maple seedlings. Cotoneaster, arbutus, rose and daphne all have turned up in rock walls where seeds have been dropped by birds.

Grasses of various kinds, from bird-transported seeds, dandelion, thistle and fireweed borne on air currents; these seedlings must be pulled or dug out by the roots. All are perennial plants, next year growing to twice the size if the roots are left in.

You may find pieces of cultivated plants such as aubrieta, the mauve rock-cress; or arabis with white or soft pink little flowers in spring. Trim back all straggling pieces, leaving a neat tuft.

From them if the roots are still living, will come new short growths next spring and a small dusting of flowers.

When the cleanup job is done as best you can, you will know how much space you have at the crevices for putting in new plants. You will see that the roots must be quite small and fibrous to gain a foothold in the small cracks and crevices.

This is where planting at time of wall construction is so much an advantage. Long roots can be laid over cracks which have been filled with fine soil. The green growth is the only part exposed on the wall face, but the roots will follow the rock joins back into the soil behind the wall where water and soil nutrients will be picked up. Deeply rooting plants can thus be grown well.

However, a few shallow rooted plants can be put into an existing rock wall. Sedums such as we see on our coastal rocks are one genus of many species quite variable in color. Small sempervivum rosettes, the Houseleek, of which there are lovely colorings changing with the seasons, will take a grip and spread.

And you might try a patch of creeping thyme. The soil needs to be rather fine. Screen your best compost soil, dampen slightly to make it hold then pack it into crevices. A tuft of thyme about the size of a quarter with roots attached is then anchored into place with soil.

Do only a portion of the planting now. It depends on the winter, amount of heavy rain and duration of frosts to be successful.

If some of the little plants grow in spring, you can go ahead in early April filling a few more cracks and crevices, not forgetting that a hose spraying will be needed often to supply moisture the first few years.

A rock wall is a challenge. Take it easy but be thorough in the early stages and it will be less of a headache in later years.

New Truck Route Asked By Parents

Langford elementary school's parents association will ask local trucking companies to reroute their trucks away from the school during scchool hours.

The action follows a public meeting this week at which 140 parents and other citizens discussed ways to improve traffic problems along Jacklin Rd.

"The noise from the trucks is terrible," association president Ona Henderson said Tuesday.

Classes in Langford elementary, at the corner of Jacklin and Goldstream, have to stop talking now when trucks rumble past, she said.

Truck route proposed by the parents is to come off the highway on to Millstream, down Station to Jacklin, thus avoiding the Jacklin-Goldstream intersection.

The parents will also write the highways department asking that four-way stop signs be placed at the corner, Henderson said.

They had earlier supported putting a traffic light there, but were told by highways officials that the road would have to be straightened out first, and straightening would mean chopping off a 10-foot strip of Langford school playground, she said.

Highways department officials are studying traffic on Jacklin Rd. following complaints from parents and Belmont-Fisher high school students.

RCMP Hunt Log Rustler

NANAIMO — The theft of $6,000 worth of logs near Nanaimo on the weekend has sparked an RCMP investigation.

Police said Tuesday the 76 Cypress logs had belonged to Q. C. Timber of Nanaimo and were being stored at Newcastle Island's Echo Bay.

The possibility the theft is connected with the loss of log booming equipment from the Harmac pulp mill a week earlier is being investigated.

Dead Man Identified

DUNCAN — The 37-year-old man who died Friday after he stumbled while crossing a railway bridge here and plunged into the Cowichan River, was identified today as John David Eden, of Duncan.

Eden, who fell into two feet of water, died as a result of a skull fracture, police said.

No date has been set for an inquest.

Crime Rings Hit 'Coming, Going'

MONTREAL (CP) — Some of Quebec's top crime fighters have been told during the last few days how organized crime "gets you coming or going" with operations on both sides of the law.

Ralph Salerno, who ended a 20-year-career with the New York City police department's intelligence unit to become a law enforcement consultant, has been providing the information to the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime.

Organized crime is forever seeking new activities that bring "bigger yield and fewer risks," Salerno told the three-man commission, headed by Judge Rheal Brunet.

Various groups were "slowly moving out" of the drug field where prison sentences have become stiffer every year and "into pornography because it's extremely profitable and convictions on crimes related to it bring mostly minor sentences."

Those still dealing in narcotics were switching from heroin to cocaine "because they've found out that a lot of people who hold good jobs and can afford it prefer to use cocaine because it's not as addicting."

At meetings with commission counsel Guy Dupre and in answers to questions at the inquiry, Salerno outlined how organized crime operates in North America.

"It does not deal with crimes of emotion but crimes that are well-planned to increase money in its coffers."

Gambling, pornography, and other activities that are restricted by law but in public demand, are extremely profitable, Salerno said.

"They deal in strategic and tactical crimes. Strategically, they place one or more persons in a particular state of mind to do, or not to do, something.

"For instance, organized crime will pay a government clerk or policeman a bribe. At first, that is only an expenditure. But it places that clerk or policeman in the right frame of mind to co-operate in future illegal activities."

Salerno said assault is also viewed as a strategic weapon.

"The fear of physical violence is what makes loan-sharking possible. It must be noted that there has been a decline in violence in the past few years because fear of loan sharks has been increasing."

Extortion and blackmail can fall into the realm of "tactical" crime, Salerno said.

"A gambling debtor, possibly someone in a government position, may see his debt wiped out for supplying confidential information that may result in an immediate profit by organized crime. Loan sharks and gambling operators, including bookmakers, maintain a close relationship."

Salerno also said organized crime bribes officials in any department of government to establish contacts.

"They work at having low-level employees promoted rapidly to penetrate governments.

The aim is not to run, but to manipulate, administrations, he said, to make way for greater profits in illegal activities. Their attempts achieved "varying degrees of success."

Salerno said "the best way to hurt, cripple and somewhat bring organized crime under control is to hit it in the pocket book because that's where it hurts them most."

MINE CLOSURE HALT SOUGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America Tuesday asked the B.C. government to halt the closure of the Britannia Copper Mine by order-in-council.

The steelworkers were reacting to an announcement by economic development minister Gary Lauk that it would be very unlikely a cabinet committee could hold a hearing prior to the scheduled Nov. 1 closing of Britannia.

The committee was set up after the steelworkers asked the government to take over the operation of the Anaconda Mining Company.

The telegram to Premier Dave Barrett and the committee asked for an order-in-council restraining Anaconda from ceasing production until the government has time to study whether the mine can be operated "in a more efficient and profitable manner."

The steelworkers said Anaconda has refused their request for severance pay for about 300 workers who will be displaced by the closure. But the union said the company offered a 21 per cent increase in wages for 60 employees who will be required to complete the mine closure.

Indians Propose Buying Forest Products Firm

NEW HAZELTON (CP) — Native Indians are to meet in Terrace Staurday to discuss a proposal to purchase 49 per cent of the assets of Rim Forest Products Ltd.

Neil Sterrit, local chairman of the British Columbia Association of Non-Status Indians, said the plan would involve a low-interest loan of $1.5 million from the provincial government, repayable over a 10-year period.

Sterrit proposes that Rim employees share the company assets with the government-controlled Canadian Cellulose Co. on a 49-51 per cent basis. basis.

Under his plan, Rim employees, both white and non-white, would repay the loan by contributing 50 cents an hour from their wages over the 10-year period of the loan.

This would give native Indians a major share in the company, since they made up at least 65 per cent of Rim's 175-employee labor force when it went into receivership in July.

"However," said Sterrit, "it would be the actual workers at the mill who would be sharing and running the operation rather than an administrative group from BCANSI or the status Indians."

Notre Dame Settles

NELSON (CP) — An agreement on a first contract between Notre Dame University and the Association of University and College Employees, Local 3, was reached Tuesday.

The agreement followed 72-hour strike notice issued by the union Thursday. Details were not released.

The new contract guarantees a base rate of $540 a month and increased employment benefits. Under the new contract, anyone with at least three years working experience will receive three weeks vacation.

In addition AUCE members will receive three days paid vacation between Christmas and New Years.

Members of the union have been negotiating six months for the contract which expires June 30, 1975.

Three Rape Counts

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Donald Robert Clark, 39, of Whonnock, was found guilty of three charges of rape and not guilty on a fourth charge by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury.

The jury returned its verdict after six hours of deliberation.

Mr. Justice Alan MacFarlane asked for a pre-sentence report. Clark is due to be sentenced Nov. 13.

The week-long trial involved charges arising out of offences dating back two years.

Roadside Hazards

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP statistics for four major lower mainland highways show that more than 90 per cent of motor vehicle accidents during a five-month study involved roadside obstacles, says the study funded by a Local Initiatives Program grant and sponsored by the B.C. Safety Council. Considered most dangerous roadside obstacles were ditches, guardrails and curbs, bridge structures, signposts and power and telephone poles.

Man Electrocuted

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Bruce Strayhorn, 28, of White Rock was electrocuted when a light standard being erected at a car lot touched a high-voltage power line. Police said Strayhorn was holding the line tied to the light standard to guide it into position when it touched the power line. A coroner's inquest has been ordered.

Greek Junta Exiled For New Plotting

Times News Services

ATHENS — Former dictator George Papadopoulos and four of his closest associates in the ousted military junta were arrested and exiled to a tiny island in the Aegean Sea today for conspiring against Greece's three-month-old civilian regime.

Former military police chief Brig. Dimitrios Ioannides, included among those to be deported, escaped arrest and was being sought by police.

A government announcement said those arrested with Papadopoulos were his former deputy premiers, Stylianos Patakos and Nicholas Makarezos; one of the hard-line ministers in his regime, Ioannis Ladas; and the former chief of the central intelligence agency, Michael Roufogalis.

The government announced Tuesday that Papadopoulos has been under house arrest for the last three weeks "for making conspiratorial moves." There have been persistent reports that leaders of the ousted military regime were plotting to make a comeback.

The jailed men, all former army officers, were the chief conspirators in the colonels' coup in April, 1967, that ended parliamentary democracy in Greece. They ran Greece until a junta of generals overthrew Papadopoulos last November in the wake of violent student demonstrations.

The reform government which replaced the dictatorship in July announced Monday that Papadopoulos, Roufogalis and three other leading members of the military dictatorship have been charged with responsibility for the "premeditated multiple murder" of at least 18 persons during the student uprising last November.

The maximum penalty on that charge is death.

The government made no mention of Mrs. Despina Papadopoulos, second wife of the former dictator, who until now was confined with him in their seaside villa. Mrs. Papadopoulos was accused of defrauding the state by drawing pay from the state intelligence service, where she used to work, long after she had retired to become Greece's first lady.

Last month she paid back $24,650 salary she had received unlawfully.

According to Greek tradition, deportees are allowed to live with their families at their place of deportation, provided they find proper housing.

Authoritative sources said the five men were taken to the small island of Kea, about 60 miles southeast of Athens.

U.S. Oil Blueprint Black

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Federal Energy Administration believes the U.S. can never again be free of foreign oil because no good substitutes for oil are anywhere near.

Basically, the FEA has concluded that coal cannot substitute for oil because it is too difficult to mine and burn. It believes that atomic power is only a substitute for coal, not oil. It also believes that synthetic fuels, solar energy and geothermal power provide no near-term relief from the chronic U.S. oil deficit because they are at least 10 years away from making even the smallest impact on energy use.

The lack of an oil substitute, the FEA suggests, means the U.S. must continue to import oil because the nation does not have enough oil of its own to fuel the economy for any length of time.

Even the oil produced by all-out drilling in the Atlantic Ocean, the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Alaska would free the U.S. from imports for only a few years time, the agency said.

These are the overriding conclusions reached by the FEA in a report labelled Blueprint for Project Independence.

Hen-Pecked Gene Accepts Token Egg

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Eugene Whelan, federal minister of agriculture, apepared stuck for words only briefly when he was approached by a man dressed as a hen Tuesday night.

The man—dressed in white with a red headdress to resemble a hen—ran through the aisles at Cleary Auditorium to hand Whelan a covered tray.

The minister, having just begun speaking to 600 delegates at the annual convention of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario, watched the man prance before the audience and utter a few cackles before presenting the tray.

Whelan took off the cover and found an egg taped to the silver tray. The presentation was an apparent reminder of the millions of surplus eggs the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency will have destroyed by the end of this year.

Whelan looked at the tray, and then said:

"If you don't keep that egg properly refrigerated it's going to go rotten."

NEWS BRIEFS

New Bomb Letter

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Authorities have received a second letter from an extortionist who claims to have blown up 11 high voltage transmission lines in the Oregon countryside and threatens more explosions unless he is paid $1 million. FBI agents would not elaborate on contents of the letter.

Heroin Haul

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP and customs officers have seized eight pounds of heroin worth at least $4.6 million. The drug was allegedly packaged in a box and mailed here from somewhere in southeast Asia. Yuen Yuk Lam, 53, of nationalist China, was charged with possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Repeating Shots

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A gunman shot seven people in a bar — six of them apparently because the gun would not stop firing.

None of the victims was severely hurt. Police said the man walked into the bar, knocked a man down and shot him. The gunman also fell and the gun kept on firing, hitting six other people. The gunman escaped.

Solomons Quake

HONOLULU (AP) — A major earthquake struck a remote area of the South Pacific, authorities said today. There were no early reports of casualties or damages. The quake, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale, was recorded in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands.

Knives Found

BOSTON (UPI) — Hundreds of students at two racially troubled Boston schools filed through metal detectors on loan from two airlines Tuesday in attempts to keep weapons out of the schools. Police found eight knives discarded on the school lawns.

Realty Probe Set

A B.C. government inquiry into the real estate industry will be launched next year, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald announced Tuesday.

University of B.C. economist Gideon Rosenbluth, 53, has been assigned the task which will include investigation of the industry's code of ethics, abuse of realtors' licences and a fairness of sales commissions in an escalating market.

Macdonald described the survey as a "leisurely look" into the industry which will take six to eight months. Rosenbluth will act as a special consultant to Macdonald and will not hold formal hearings such as royal commissions usually hold.

Speculation by salesmen will be studied but Macdonald said the inquiry will also look into the possibility of establishing some minimum wage guarantee for sale representatives.

While escalating real estate prices also mean increasing commissions, Macdonald said the lowest 25 per cent of salesmen receive an average monthly salary of only $249.

"That may be okay for part-timers or people who come into and then leave the industry, but it's below minimum wage," he said.

Part of the problem may be too many salesmen, he added.

Salesmen are not the only people involved in speculation, said Macdonald, and he said he wondered whether B.C. should follow Ontario's lead with a tax on land speculation profits.

Rosenbluth's appointment was announced at a meeting of the salesmen's division of Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board and it met with applause from the audience.

The crowd was not so pleased, however, with the suggestion of a minimum pay guarantee for salesmen and one man shouted from the group that salesmen are free-wheeling people who want to remain on commission.

Increase in Pay Hinted for MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases for MPs may be in the offing, Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp announced in the Commons Tuesday.

Replying to Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who complained that members face soaring living costs like everyone else, Sharp said he hoped to "persuade the government to bring forward some proposals about members' salaries."

Members last received increases in 1971, when pay went to $18,000 from $12,000 a year.

In addition, MPs receive a tax-free expenses allowance of $8,000 to $9,650 a year, depending on constituency.

A salary increase based on inflation would give MPs an increase to at least $23,040 — their present $18,000 plus a 28-per cent raise of $5,040.

One parliamentary official has estimated that the average MP works about 60 hours a week "and you can add an automatic 20 hours to that for ministers." Most organized workers now work between 32 and 38 hours a week with provisions for overtime.

The extra work that goes with a cabinet post is worth more money—a $15,000 salary plus unlimited expenses on top of the basic $18,000. Cabinet ministers also have a $2,000 car allowance.

Commons' Hour Work A Billion

OTTAWA (FP) — Starting today, and for three days, each hour in the House of Commons will be worth about $1,212,121,212.

That is the total of $20 billion in estimates — the cost of running the country for a year — divided by 16½ hours — the time spent by elected MPs to officially approve each department's budget for the current fiscal year.

After the alloted 16½ hours, the $20 billion will be voted by the House and the subject will be closed until next year's estimates are introduced sometime next February.

"That's the way it's been done for the past 100 years," a spokesman for the Privy Council Office said in an interview yesterday.

Part of the estimates had been examined in various committees last Spring, but the July election and the summer recess had left the greater part of the estimates unexamined.

One Liberal MP said in an interview he was "scandalized" at the thought of "letting the public service put in a bill for $20 billion with so little attention on our part."

Major U.S. Oil Firms Report Soaring Profits

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The biggest U.S. oil companies began reporting third-quarter earnings Tuesday, with profits increased to one and a half times over those reported a year ago.

Exxon Corp., the largest, said earnings rose 25.4 per cent over the third quarter of 1973, while Shell Oil's were ahead 158 per cent, Standard Oil of Indiana's earnings doubled and Gulf Oil Corp.'s were up 31 per cent.

In Canada, Imperial Oil Ltd. reported earnings for the first nine months ended Sept. 30 were $252 million or $1.93 a share compared with $154 million or $1.18 a share during the corresponding period in 1973.

The company said in a release the increased earnings were due to higher prices for crude oil, natural gas and petroleum products, and a stronger market and improved prices for chemicals.

Earnings by Gulf and Exxon in the U.S. had risen dramatically in the 1973 period over the 1972 quarter.

Exxon said its earnings totalled $800 million for the three months, or $3.58 a share, compared with $638 million or $2.85 a share in the like period of last year. In the second quarter Exxon earned $3.80 a share.

For the nine months, profits were $2.28 billion or $10.19 a share, up 37.7 per cent from $1.65 billion or $7.39 cents a share last year.

Sales for the latest quarter more than doubled to $11.9 billion from $5.47 billion, while sales in the nine months period were $33.27 billion as against $20.09 billion last year.

Worldwide chemical sales, higher domestic crude and natural gas prices, and inventory profits abroad arising from higher crude prices were the major reasons for the higher earnings, Exxon Chairman J. K. Jamieson said.

Measured by volume, nine-month sales of petroleum, production of crude oil and refinery runs were down from last year, Exxon said, while natural gas sales improved slightly to 9.7 billion cubic feet daily.

Shell said its profits for the three months ended Sept. 30 were $216 million or $3.21 a share, compared with $83.6 million or $1.24 a share in the 1973 period. Sales for the quarter totalled $2.25 billion, up from $1.43 billion in the 1973 quarter.

TRUDEAU IN BELGIUM

BRUSSELS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau arrived here from Paris today on the last leg of a European visit aimed at strengthening Canada's economic ties with the European Common Market.

Trudeau, accompanied by his wife and Canadian government officials, was greeted at the airport by his Belgain counterpart, Leo Tindemans.

Trudeau's motorcade left the airport immediately for Stuyvenberg Castle on the outskirts of Brussels where the Canadian prime minister will be the guest of the Belgian government.

Trudeau was to drive later in the day to Tindemans' residence to hold political talks.

The first day of the visit will end with a gala dinner hosted by the Belgian government at Egmont Palace.

He will confer Thursday with NATO and Common Market officials.

He heads for home Friday after a morning news conference and a luncheon.

'Save Highlands' Campaign Gains Momentum

The "Save the Highlands" campaign was turned on full force at a public meeting Tuesday night and picked up support from other community groups and some municipal officials.

Wearing paper flowers proclaiming the campaign slogan, members of the Highlands District Association pleaded with the Capital Region Board to save the "island of serenity" in the midst of Greater Victoria.

The public hearings, called to find out what Greater Victoria residents think of the regional development plan, drew crowds of about 80 in the afternoon and another 150 in the evening. Some 20 briefs were presented during the two sessions.

Objections to the plan were numerous and pleas for amendments to the plan ranged from scrapping the whole thing to moving a warehousing zone out of one small area.

At both afternoon and evening meetings, board chairman Jim Campbell tried to reassure groups and individuals that the regional plan will not be an inflexible, unalterable framework of planning policies.

"I know some people think it's a concrete, stainless steel blueprint that will be stamped on this area and its residents for all time, but it's not," he told one speaker.

And, dealing specifically with the concerns of Highlands residents, Campbell stressed that the CRD has not arrived at any estimated population totals for residential development in that area.

When one resident pointed out that a newspaper report put the ultimate figure as high as 35,000 people, Campbell shrugged and said: "We're also in the difficult position of having everyone concerned about this using the figure that happens to suit their purposes best."

Highlands Association president Frank Spellacy told the board the Highlands, which under the plan is slated for heavy urban development by the year 2,001, should be preserved as a recreational area for Greater Victoria.

He suggested that the zoning designation of "potential urban" for the Highlands be changed to "upland" which would cut off dense development.

The Highlands cause also received support from Derek Mallard of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment; from Bruce Hardy of the Victoria Sierra Club; from Oak Bay Ald. and regional director John Goult, who said alternatives must be studied; from Saanich Ald. and director Sandy Noel who said costs of servicing the Highlands must be looked at and from Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner who said he was impressed by the presentation.

Campbell said population in the Highlands will depend on detailed studies of sewage, transportation and other related problems.

Such studies would determine the population density which that area could absorb in the long-term, but "we are not able to say what that will be at this stage of the game."

Saanich, represented by Mayor Ed Lum, filed a statement objecting to several proposals in the regional plan, and stressed that the plan itself will not be "acceptable" to that municipality unless its suggested amendments are adopted.

In particular, Lum said, Saanich opposes the concept that each municipality should supplement the regional plan's goals and objectives by preparing its own official community plan.

The Saanich feeling is that this technique will deprive municipalities of some of their present automony, he said, because the community plans once adopted and registered can only be changed with cabinet approval.

The method will also prove "unwieldy" as it will "remove the very flexibility which could be required to respond to emerging crisis situations such as housing, transportation, supply and agricultural production."

Lum said to suggest that the regional plan will not be implemented without such

A Saanich man's potato patch has produced a "hot potato" for council's public works committee.

The problem is the potato-grower has decided to utilize road allowance for his Victory Garden and a neighbor is complaining of the "mutilation of the boulevard".

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren counselled the committee:

"The patch does not restrict vehicular or pedestrian movement within the road allowance. The only problem, as we can see, is one of esthetics."

Ald. Fred Severson observed the potato patch appeared to be "a good land use" and Ald. Sandy Noel, "You can't live by bread alone!"

Ald. Les Passmore asked if the spud grower confined his crop to the boulevard or was his own property also yielding its share of produce.

The committee will forego a decision until this fact has been checked out.

Meanwhile, municipal clerk Gord Hayward has suggested the potato cultivator should have a boulevard permit, restricted to this year's crop if necessary for neighborly rapport.

Along with the seemingly non-stop sunshine of this amazing summerlike fall, Victorians are enjoying a number of by-products and out-of-season "extras."

For instance, those flower-filled window boxes that make a gay splash of color against the beige exterior of City Hall. Parks director Cliff Bate says normally by this time of year the geraniums and petunias and so forth have long been exchanged for sober evergreen shrubs.

But, at least on the shady Centenial Square side of the building, this year the flowers just don't want to admit defeat. Long may they flourish!

Mrs. McClung, has also worked closely with the Cerebral Palsy Association of Lower Vancouver Island since 1953 when she joined as a volunteer worker.

Clinic board chairman David A. Hall said the hundreds of handicapped children who have been helped by the clinic are a tribute to the hard work over the years performed by Mrs. McClung.

She will be succeeded by Garth Homer, social planning services director for the Capital Regional District, who assumes administrative duties at the clinic Nov. 15.

Museum Dies Dec. 31 . . . Unless

The Maritime Museum of B.C. in Bastion Square will close its doors and liquidate all assets Dec. 31, unless governments come through with financial help immediately, museum director Col. J. W. D. Symons said today.

He said the museum trustees voted Tuesday night to take that course of action as the only way to avoid "financial disaster."

"We've reached the end of the line and unless a miracle happens and the three levels of government co-operate in helping our finances, we feel we should pack it in."

Symons said the museum's problems were compounded by an eviction notice from the city of Victoria which said the museum must vacate the courthouse building by March 31, 1975.

"The city has offered us the Malahat Building (on Wharf Street) but we'd be looking at a capital cost of $750,000 to get the location in shape."

In addition, he said, the operating budget for next year has been estimated at $108,000 and the museum could see "its way clear" to finding only $36,000, leaving a shortfall of $72,000.

"I'm one of the museum types who feels the museum in the true sense of the word operates to make money — but to preserve our history. It has to operate on grants."

Symond, director of the museum for 14 years, nine of which have been spent at the courthouse building, said that if the city cancelled its eviction notice, the museum might be able to continue operation.

"But we've spent 14 years jumping from precipice to precipice (finding funds) and we need more stability in the financial outlook."

Every effort will be made to make sure the collection — assessed at $250,000 six years ago — is kept as a separate entity. Symons said he'd like to see all exhibits, including the three-masted Tilikum schooner which is considered the most valuable asset, remain in the provincial capital.

A general meeting of all museum members has been called for Nov. 12 when ways of disposing of the collection will be considered.

The press conference this morning was attended by Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst who suggested a solution would be locating the museum's exhibits in the old Crystal Gardens.

"The Provincial Museum needs more space and the Maritime exhibit could be administrated by the Provincial Museum as an adjunct," Gorst said.

City council has given no indication of future plans for the courthouse building other than its use should be planned to include a variety of cultural and civic community activities.

"What do they want? More itty-bitty boutiques and sex shops?" asked museum trustee Jim McCrossan.

Dan Gallacher, curator of history at the Provincial Museum, said he was "dismayed" to hear of the likelihood of the Maritime Museum closing.

"Their collection is outstanding and absolutely essential to an understanding of history in B.C.," he said.

Asked if the Provincial Museum would accept the Maritime Museum collection he said that would have to be a government decision.

"But it's vital that collection, built over the years, be retained in British Columbia and in my view the Provincial Museum is the only institution capable of taking it on, caring for it, strengthening it over the years and displaying it in a manner worthy of it."

FINAL FLOURISH after her successful mission off West Africa was made by the weathership Quadra as her master, Capt. Randy Dykes, nosed dockside stern-first past sister ship Vancouver.

Weatherships Safe for Now From Satellite Replacement

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It will be years before the Victoria-based weatherships Quadra and Vancouver will be replaced by satellites.

This was the assurance given today when Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve greeted the Quadra on her return from a five-month international scientific exercise off West Africa.

The minister was asked, after she had lauded Quadra's contribution to the weather probe in which 17 countries took part, whether Quadra and her sister ship were in danger of being outdated by satellites.

Through Dr. R. W. Stewart, chairman of the exercise's organizing committee, reporters were told the two ships would continue their watches on Station Papa, 900 miles out in the Pacific, until at least 1982.

Stewart said American weather experts considered the Station Papa data the most important information available and even when satellites could take over more of the work now done by the two ships there would be a need for some sort of base in this vicinity.

Mme. Sauve and other Ottawa officials praised the crew and scientists working on the project for having established Canada as a leading participant in the GARP Atlantic Tropical Experiment (G.A.T.E.), which was the first major international experiment of the Global Atmospheric Research Program.

SAUVE
. . . assurances

"She (Quadra) bristled with advanced instrumentation," Mme. Sauve said, "much of it designed in Canada; innovative equipment which passed this demanding test with flying colors."

She said Quadra's cargo of tapes and other material gleaned from the weather probe would do much to help scientists to discover means in which to predict weather patterns faster, more efficiently and for longer periods ahead.

She presented Quadra's master, Randy Dykes, with a special plaque marking Canada's pride in his ship's achievements.

Dykes said the morale of his men had been high, in spite of the high humidity in which they had to work.

Ships from 14 countries took part in the exercise and Dykes said it had been a geat experiment in international exchange.

Asked if language communication had been any problem, Dykes quipped:

"Bad language, maybe!" then went on:

"When people couldnt understand English, things had to be translated into Russian sentence by sentence, paragraph by paragraph, and back again. It made conferences twice as long as I'd like to have seen them.'

The environment minister was asked her government's position on the proposed super oil tanker route through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to Puget Sound.

She said a "stocktaking meeting" was planned for Canada and U.S. officials, to be held in Washington, D.C. in early November.

She said the Canadian government wants better traffic control, a closer look at navigational aids, and were investigating alternative ways of transporting Arctic oil.

Library Talks Public

For the first time, initial management-labor talks on a new contract between Greater Victoria Public Library and 60 employees will be public.

The open meeting Nov. 4 should show what the union is demanding, library board chairman Shirley Dowell said Tuesday.

The employees are represented at the bargaining table by local 410 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

"The union isn't going to like it but that doesn't matter," said Dowell.

CUPE's field representative could not be reached for comment.

Meanwhile, the library will likely operate at a deficit this year for the first time in more than five years, library board vice-chairman Gordon Hutchison told the board.

The deficit has been forecast at $1,700 on a total expenditure of $1,250,237.

The bulk of library revenue comes from local municipalities, and any over-expenditure will likely also be covered by these governments, said board members.

Although the library is 12th in size in Canada, its expenditures are 19th on the list, library board members said.

"We're going backwards instead of forwards," said chairman Dowell, and have been moving down the list in comparative expenditures over the past few years.

Dollar expenditure is not a strict indication of services being provided, board members agreed, but Victoria's library does need more money, they said.

"We run a tight ship," Dowell said, and don't throw money away, but the library should be spending more and providing more.

Victoria's library is also second in book circulation per capita in Canada.

"But we're not providing the services some other libraries are," said board member Clyde Savage.

The board decided to hire former newspaperman Pat Murphy of Victoria to do two months' public relations for the library so that increased public knowledge will result in increased public funds.

Back to the Files

Government officials today began searching for a new conciliator for teacher-school board contract talks on Vancouver Island after discovering the first conciliator they appointed is away on vacation.

Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm was officially appointed to the job late Monday and it wasn't until Tuesday education department officials realized their appointee is in England and won't be back for several months.

Embarrassed education officials placed the blame on the labor department which provided the names of the conciliators without checking to see of they were actually available for service.

The two departments got together this morning to check out all the appointments and find a new conciliator to mediate talks between teachers and school boards in the six lower Island school districts.

Education officials indicate they have a person in mind but they won't make the same mistake twice and are keeping mum on the name until it is confirmed.

Salmon Aid Request Near

Water Commissioner Ron Upward expects to be asked to release water into Goldstream River early next week to help salmon reach their spawning grounds.

"I haven't yet been asked by the fisheries department for water," he said. "But I expect this to come towards the end of the month."

He was commenting on complaints that the lack of water in the river is preventing salmon from moving upstream.

A fisheries official said the department will ask for water as soon as there is a sufficient buildup of salmon at the south end of Saanich Inlet, near the mouth of the river.

"There still appears to be few fish waiting to go upstream," he said. "We are watching the situation closely."

However, some fisheries experts and conservationists think water should be released now.

In immediate danger of dying before spawning are the spring salmon, the largest of the species and the first to spawn in the river, Howard English, a member of the International Salmon Commission advisory committee said.

English said springs come in October and "these are the fish which take a beating because of the lack of water in the river."

Springs weigh between 12 and 26 pounds and are a spectacular sight swimming upstream.

Next to mive upstream, mostly in November, is the coho, a smaller species of salmon weighing between six and 15 pounds. The chums, a third species are the last to enter the river.

Conservationist Freeman King disagrees with federal fisheries officials who claim there are not enough fish in the bay to warrant asking for water.

"Water should be released immediately," he said. "The fish are waiting in the bay now. How the hell can they come up without water?"

YOUR TURN TO COOK:

Cabbage Rolls

By SOPHIE WOLOCHOW

(Today's reader recipe was sent in by Mrs. David Wolochow, of 412-450 Simcoe and has examples of what will be displayed at the annual Hadassah Bazaar next Wednesday. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would gladly share, please send it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

The Hadassah Bazaars across Canada have become famous. Here displayed by the cook who is secretary of the local chapter, is a tempting platter of meat and cabbage rolls, which are very popular with Bazaar patrons.

The Cheese Cake is a luscious dessert at any time and since it is made with cottage cheese is not too rich for the average palate.

The Bazaar which takes place on Wednesday, Oct. 30 from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall, 932 Balmoral, will feature a hot beef luncheon, reasonably priced, and a corned beef sandwich bar. The delicatessen booth will feature chopped liver, freshly made, dill pickles, sweet and sour meat balls, meat and cabbage rolls, and many other specialties such as blintzes, knishes and kugel.

Home-made candy will be featured this year, and the bake table will as usual be laden with home-made bread, bagels, buns, rolls, cakes and cookies.

There will be an attractive choice of raffles, and three door prizes. For flower and plant lovers there will be a beautiful and colorful booth.

MEAT AND CABBAGE ROLLS (PRAKIS)

1 medium sized cabbage
1½ lbs. ground meat
2 tbsp. raw rice
2 large onions
1 egg
small piece of brisket

Remove cabbage leaves whole, and pour boiling water over them. Cover and let stand. Add rice, egg, pepper and salt to the meat. Put brisket into pot with sliced onion, pepper, salt and 2 tbsp. sugar. Cook over medium heat until golden brown. Drain cabbage, put a heaping tablespoon of meat mixture in each cabbage leaf and roll, completely enclosing meat. Put each roll into the pot with onion and brisket; add one large can of tomatoes. Cook slowly, shaking pot often so balls will not stick, for about 4 hours. If desired, add lemon juice to taste. This should have a sweet and sour taste.

CHEESE CAKE

1 lb. graham wafers
2 lbs. cottage cheese
2½ cups white sugar
4 eggs
½ lemon (juice and rind)
½ orange (juice and rind)
½ lb. melted butter
1 tsp. vanilla

Mix crumbed wafers with ¼ lb. butter. Line 8x11½ pan with half crumbs. Mix cheese with rest of butter, vanilla, eggs and sugar. Add juice and rind of lemon and orange. Pour on to crumbs and put remainder of crumbs on top. Bake ½ hour in moderate oven (350 degrees). Cut when cool.

Crunchy Mackerel Casserole

7 oz. can mackerel, drained well.
1 cup finely diced carrots
1 cup finely diced parsnips
1 cup finely diced celery
2 Tbsp butter
2 Tbsp butter
2 Tbsp flour
1 cup milk
½ cup walnuts — chopped
¼ tsp dill weed
2 Tbsp fresh, parsley chopped
1½ tsp salt
⅛ tsp pepper.

Saute the vegetables in 2 Tbsp butter for 15 minutes, layer the vegetables and mackerel in a greased casserole, reserving ½ cup of vegetables. Make a cream sauce by combing flour with 2 Tbsp melted butter in a sauce pan, blend in milk slowly and heat stirring continually until thickened, season and add dill and parsley. Pour sauce over the layers and garnish with the remaining vegetables and walnuts. Serves 4-6.

Potato Chowder For Lunch

1 cup diced raw potato
1 small onion or 1 whole garlic clove
1 cup diced celery with leaves
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1½ cup boiling water
½ tsp salt
1 cup milk (skim milk powder with water)
Paprika

Simmer the prepared vegetables in the boiling salted water until tender, 15 or 20 minutes.

Break the potato and other vegetables with a wide wooden fork if they still hold their shape, masking them a little against the side of the saucepan.

Add the milk made with the powdered skim. Bring to boiling point, stirring to prevent sticking.

Serve hot, sprinkle with a little paprika. Paprika is not a hot spice but is the powdered form of dried sweet red pepper, pleasant and even beneficial with its trace of vitamin C.

A special note for those who prepare lunch for one person —use these quantities and store half the soup in a covered bowl for the next day. But be sure to enliven it with either plenty of freshly chopped parsley, chives or cress.

Family Safari For Home Goodies

HALIFAX (CP) — It's a neighborhood family affair and an all-seasons' weekly safari.

Mothers and kids, and sometimes dads, take part in the Friday and Saturday morning fun for shopping for the best and freshest home grown, home-baked and home-crafted goodies.

Going to market has been a family tradition in Halifax for generations, ever since the first "Green Market" was opened along waterfront streets in 1750, a year after this historic port city was founded.

Faithful customers and stall holders have followed the market through successive moves from the waterfront area to its current site in the airy lower level of the industrial northern sector of the city.

Stalls are replete with crusty bread loaves, cakes and cookies, Fresh-churned butter and cottage cheese; thick cream, new-laid eggs, poultry and rabbits in season, reward the buyer as she wends her way through the market's kaleidoscope of sound and color.

Sparkling jars of mouth-watering jams, jellies and relishes; early summer lettuce and beet greens and later, a profusion of other taste-tempting vegetables only hours from the good earth, catch the eye of the discerning gourmet.

JUST A FEW OF THOSE THINGS

SHEPWAY, England (UPI) — Damon Robinson says he is not upset about being fired as a garbage truck driver for the local council.

On Monday last week he drove his truck into a ditch. On Wednesday he ran it into a brick wall. On Thursday the clutch on his truck burned out. On Friday he tipped the truck over in a country lane.

"I don't feel bad about them kicking me out," said Damon, a former British Army tank driver. "I don't think I'm a good driver any more."

Hen-Pecked Gene Accepts Token Egg

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Eugene Whelan, federal minister of agriculture appeared stuck for words only briefly when he was approached by a man dressed as a hen Tuesday night.

The man—dressed in white with a red headdress to resemble a hen—ran through the aisles at Cleary Auditorium to hand Whelan a covered tray.

The minister, having just begun speaking to 600 delegates at the annual convention of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario, watched the man prance before the audience and utter a few cackles before presenting the tray.

Whelan took off the cover and found an egg taped to the silver tray. The presentation was an apparent reminder of the millions of surplus eggs the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency will have destroyed by the end of this year.

Whelan looked at the tray, and then said:

"If you don't keep that egg properly refrigerated it's going to go rotten."

U.S. Oil Blueprint Black

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Federal Energy Administration believes the U.S. can never again be free of foreign oil because no good substitutes for oil are anywhere near.

Basically, the FEA has concluded that coal cannot substitute for oil because it is too difficult to mine and burn. It believes that atomic power is only a substitute for coal, not oil. It also believes that synthetic fuels, solar energy and geothermal power provide no near-term relief from the chronic U.S. oil deficit because they are at least 10 years away from making even the smallest impact on energy use.

The lack of an oil substitute, the FEA suggests, means the U.S. must continue to import oil because the nation does not have enough oil of its own to fuel the economy for any length of time.

Even the oil produced by all-out drilling in the Atlantic Ocean, the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Alaska would free the U.S. from imports for only a few years time, the agency said.

These are the overriding conclusions reached by the FEA in a report labelled Blueprint for Project Independence.

Barrie Clark Ducks Rent Ceiling Issue

Special to The Times

B.C.'s rentalsman has refused to recommend a new rent hike ceiling for the province's 300,000 tenants and instead has handed the controversial problem to Attorney-General Alex Macddnald.

In a Vancouver press conference today Barry Clark admitted he has "ducked the question" by making recommendations to Macdonald on the current eight per cent maximum allowable rent increase without actually suggesting a new figure for the ceiling.

Clark told reporters it would be a conflict of interest for him to recommend a rent ceiling and at the same time try to act as an impartial judge and problem-solver in landlord-tenant disputes.

Instead, Clark has recommended that Macdonald set up a separate commission to decide how big a rent hike landlords should be permitted — a recommendation he claimed Macdonald will implement in the legislature session which will open Nov. 1.

Clark said his own information indicated the eight per cent level was "too low" but he refused to say what the level would be.

Clark hinted he opted for the commission scheme after a report by University of B.C. economist Dr. John Cragg indicated a rent ceiling figure far higher than the eight per cent figure.

"I told the attorney-general if I were required to recommend on the rent increase I would have to go with the Cragg report, and he indicated he would go along with my recommendation on a commission," Clark said.

Clark said the Cragg formula, which he earlier called "shocklingly high" took into account skyrocketing costs which the eight per cent freeze failed to account for.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said in Victoria following Clark's announcement he is aware of the problems facing the rentalsman's office and that he will discuss the problems with Cabinet.

He said he wished to assure tenants that if the rentalsman cannot handle rent increase reviews and complaints, somebody will carry on the function.

He agreed that in time the policy end of the rentalsman's responsibilities may move closer to the housing department and the complaint side could operate separately.

"We have no intention of abandoning tenants who need rental review," he said.

The attorney-general said Clark has been doing a "marvellous job" and he has full confidence in him.

Clarke also partially agreed with landlords who have claimed that the eight per cent freeze has created a housing shortage by discouraging people from building rental accommodation.

"I don't think the cessation of home construction was caused by the eight per cent freeze because the situation is the same in Ontario and Quebec where there is no freeze," Clarke said.

"But I do think that if there has been a time in the past 12 months when this cessation would have been turned around, then the eight per cent freeze is in all probability responsible for a failure to start up."

Landlord groups acted quickly, blasting Clarke for "passing the buck" on the controversial question.

Realty Probe Set

A B.C. government inquiry into the real estate industry will be launched next year, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald announced Tuesday.

University of B.C. economist Gideon Rosenbluth, 53, has been assigned the task which will include investigation of the industry's code of ethics, abuse of realtors' licences and a fairness of sales commissions in an escalating market.

Macdonald described the survey as a "leisurely look" into the industry which will take six to eight months. Rosenbluth will act as a special consultant to Macdonald and will not hold formal hearings such as royal commissions usually hold.

Speculation by salesmen will be studied but Macdonald said the inquiry will also look into the possibility of establishing some minimum wage guarantee for sale representatives.

While escalating real estate prices also mean increasing commissions, Macdonald said the lowest 25 per cent of salesmen receive an average monthly salary of only $249.

"That may be okay for part-timers or people who come into and then leave the industry, but it's below minimum wage," he said.

Part of the problem may be too many salesmen, he added.

Salesmen are not the only people involved in speculation, said Macdonald, and he said he wondered whether B.C. should follow Ontario's lead with a tax on land speculation profits.

Rosenbluth's appointment was announced at a meeting of the salesmen's division of Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board and it met with applause from the audience.

The crowd was not so pleased, however, with the suggestion of a minimum pay guarantee for salesmen and one man shouted from the group that salesmen are free-wheeling people who want to remain on commission.

NEWS BRIEFS

New Bomb Letter

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Authorities have received a second letter from an extortionist who claims to have blown up 11 high voltage transmission lines in the Oregon countryside and threatens more explosions unless he is paid $1 million. FBI agents would not elaborate on contents of the letter.

Heroin Haul

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP and customs officers have seized eight pounds of heroin worth at least $4.6 million. The drug was allegedly packaged in a box and mailed here from somewhere in southeast Asia. Yuen Yuk Lam, 53, of nationalist China, was charged with possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Repeating Shots

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A gunman shot seven people in a bar — six of them apparently because the gun would not stop firing.

None of the victims was severely hurt. Police said the man walked into the bar, knocked a man down and shot him. The gunman also fell and the gun kept on firing, hitting six other people. The gunman escaped.

Solomons Quake

HONOLULU (AP) — A major earthquake struck a remote area of the South Pacific, authorities said today. There were no early reports of casualties or damages. The quake, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale, was recorded in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands.

Knives Found

BOSTON (UPI) — Hundreds of students at two racially troubled Boston schools filed through metal detectors on loan from two airlines Tuesday in attempts to keep weapons out of the schools. Police found eight knives discarded on the school lawns.

Increase in Pay Hinted for MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases for MPs may be in the offing, Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp announced in the Commons Tuesday.

Replying to Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who complained that members face soaring living costs like everyone else, Sharp said he hoped to "persuade the government to bring forward some proposals about members' salaries."

Members last received increases in 1971, when pay went to $18,000 from $12,000 a year.

In addition, MPs receive a tax-free expenses allowance of $8,000 to $9,650 a year, depending on constituency.

A salary increase based on inflation would give MPs an increase to at least $23,040 — their present $18,000 plus a 28-per cent raise of $5,040.

One parliamentary official has estimated that the average MP works about 60 hours a week "and you can add an automatic 20 hours to that for ministers." Most organized workers now work between 32 and 38 hours a week with provisions for overtime.

The extra work that goes with a cabinet post is worth more money—a $15,000 salary plus unlimited expenses on top of the basic $18,000. Cabinet ministers also have a $2,000 car allowance.

Greek Junta to Exile For New Conspiracy

Times News Services

ATHENS — Former dictator George Papadopoulos and four of his closest associates in the ousted military junta were arrested and exiled to a tiny island in the Aegean Sea today for conspiring against Greece's three-month-old civilian regime.

Former military police chief Brig. Dimitrios Ioannides, included among those to be deported, escaped arrest and was being sought by police.

A government announcement said those arrested with Papadopoulos were his former deputy premiers, Stylianos Patakos and Nicholas Makarezos; one of the hard-line ministers in his regime, Ioannis Ladas; and the former chief of the central intelligence agency, Michael Roufogalis.

The government announced Tuesday that Papadopoulos has been under house arrest for the last three weeks "for making conspiratorial moves." There have been persistent reports that leaders of the ousted military regime were plotting to make a comeback.

The jailed men, all former army officers, were the chief conspirators in the colonels' coup in April, 1967, that ended parliamentary democracy in Greece. They ran Greece until a junta of generals overthrew Papadopoulos last November in the wake of violent student demonstrations.

The reform government which replaced the dictatorship in July announced Monday that Papadopoulos, Roufogalis and three other leading members of the military dictatorship have been charged with responsibility for the "premeditated multiple murder" of at least 18 persons during the student uprising last November.

The maximum penalty on that charge is death.

CONVICTS SHOOT WAY OUT

MONTREAL (UPI) — Five "extremely dangerous" convicts shot their way out of the visitors' room at the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary today and fled in a series of two cars to the downtown area where police staged a massive manhunt.

The driver of the second car, who was taken hostage, was later found unharmed. Police said he had been forced into the trunk of the car when it was abandoned by the prisoners but later managed to free himself.

A police spokesman said the men, three of whom escaped last June from the same maximum security prison, were "considered extremely dangerous.

"These guys shoot to kill," he said. "They've got nothing to lose."

A spokesman for the prison said the five had congregated in the visitors' room, along with another inmate and about 16 visitors, when they were suddenly given a "bag of arms" apparently smuggled in by an unidentified visitor.

The men then ran out, firing several times as they fled he said.

Oil Firms Profits Soar

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The biggest U.S. oil companies began reporting third-quarter earnings Tuesday, with profits increased to one and a half times over those reported a year ago.

Exxon Corp., the largest, said earnings rose 25.4 per cent over the third quarter of 1973, while Shell Oil's were ahead 158 per cent, Standard Oil of Indiana's earnings doubled and Gulf Oil Corp.'s were up 31 per cent.

In Canada, Imperial Oil Ltd. reported earnings for the first nine months ended Sept. 30 were $252 million or $1.93 a share compared with $154 million or $1.18 a share during the corresponding period in 1973.

The company said in a release, the increased earnings were due to higher prices for crude oil, natural gas and petroleum products, and a stronger market and improved prices for chemicals.

Earnings by Gulf and Exxon in the U.S. had risen dramatically in the 1973 period over the 1972 quarter.

'Save Highlands' Campaign Gains Momentum

The "Save the Highlands" campaign was turned on full force at a public meeting Tuesday night and picked up support from other community groups and some municipal officials.

Wearing paper flowers proclaiming the campaign slogan, members of the Highlands District Association pleaded with the Capital Region Board to save the "island of serenity" in the midst of Greater Victoria.

The public hearings, called to find out what Greater Victoria residents think of the regional development plan, drew crowds of about 80 in the afternoon and another 150 in the evening. Some 20 briefs were presented during the two sessions.

Objections to the plan were numerous and pleas for amendments to the plan ranged from scrapping the whole thing to moving a warehousing zone out of one small area.

At both afternoon and evening meetings, board chairman Jim Campbell tried to reassure groups and individuals that the regional plan will not be an inflexible, unalterable framework of planning policies.

"I know some people think it's a concrete, stainless steel blueprint that will be stamped on this area and its residents for all time, but it's not," he told one speaker.

And, dealing specifically with the concerns of Highlands residents, Campbell stressed that the CRD has not arrived at any estimated population totals for residential development in that area.

When one resident pointed out that a newspaper report put the ultimate figure as high as 35,000 people, Campbell shrugged and said: "We're also in the difficult position of having everyone concerned about this using the figure that happens to suit their purposes best."

Highlands Association president Frank Spellacy told the board the Highlands, which under the plan is slated for heavy urban development by the year 2,001, should be preserved as a recreational area for Greater Victoria.

He suggested that the zoning designation of "potential urban" for the Highlands be changed to "upland" which would cut off dense development.

The Highlands cause also received support from Derek Mallard of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment; from Bruce Hardy of the Victoria Sierra Club; from Oak Bay Ald. and regional director John Goult, who said alternatives must be studied; from Saanich Ald. and director Sandy Noel who said costs of servicing the Highlands must be looked at and from Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner who said he was impressed by the presentation.

Campbell said population in the Highlands will depend on detailed studies of sewage, transportation and other related problems.

Such studies would determine the population density which that area could absorb in the long-term, but "we are not able to say what that will be at this stage of the game."

Saanich, represented by Mayor Ed Lum, filed a statement objecting to several proposals in the regional plan, and stressed that the plan itself will not be "acceptable" to that municipality unless its suggested amendments are adopted.

In particular, Lum said, Saanich opposes the concept that each municipality should supplement the regional plan's goals and objectives by preparing its own official community plan.

The Saanich feeling is that this technique will deprive municipalities of some of their present automony, he said, because the community plans once adopted and registered can only be changed with cabinet approval.

The method will also prove "unwieldy" as it will "remove the very flexibility which could be required to respond to emerging crisis situations such as housing, transportation, supply and agricultural production."

Lum said to suggest that the regional plan will not be implemented without such

New Truck Route Asked By Parents

Langford elementary school's parents association will ask local trucking companies to reroute their trucks away from the school during school hours.

The action follows a public meeting this week at which 140 parents and other citizens discussed ways to improve traffic problems along Jacklin Rd.

"The noise from the trucks is terrible," association president Ona Henderson said Tuesday.

Classes in Langford elementary, at the corner of Jacklin and Goldstream, have to stop talking now when trucks rumble past, she said.

Truck route proposed by the parents is to come off the highway on to Millstream, down Station to Jacklin, thus avoiding the Jacklin-Goldstream intersection.

The parents will also write the highways department asking that four-way stop signs be placed at the corner, Henderson said.

They had earlier supported putting a traffic light there, but were told by highways officials that the road would have to be straightened out first, and straightening would mean chopping off a 10-foot strip of Langford school playground, she said.

Highways department officials are studying traffic on Jacklin Rd. following complaints from parents and Belmont-Fisher high school students.

RCMP Hunt Log Rustler

NANAIMO — The theft of $6,000 worth of logs near Nanaimo on the weekend has sparked an RCMP investigation.

Police said Tuesday the 76 Cypress logs had belonged to Q. C. Timber of Nanaimo and were being stored at Newcastle Island's Echo Bay.

The possibility the theft is connected with the loss of log booming equipment from the Harmac pulp mill a week earlier is being investigated.

Dead Man Identified

DUNCAN — The 37-year-old man who died Friday after he stumbled while crossing a railway bridge here and plunged into the Cowichan River, was identified today as John David Eden, of Duncan.

Eden, who fell into two feet of water, died as a result of a skull fracture, police said.

No date has been set for an inquest.

Hen-Pecked Gene Accepts Token Egg

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Eugene Whelan, federal minister of agriculture appeared stuck for words only briefly when he was approached by a man dressed as a hen Tuesday night.

The man—dressed in white with a red headdress to resemble a hen—ran through the aisles at Cleary Auditorium to hand Whelan a covered tray.

The minister, having just begun speaking to 600 delegates at the annual convention of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario, watched the man prance before the audience and utter a few cackles before presenting the tray.

Whelan took off the cover and found an egg taped to the silver tray. The presentation was an apparent reminder of the millions of surplus eggs the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency will have destroyed by the end of this year.

Whelan looked at the tray, and then said:

"If you don't keep that egg properly refrigerated it's going to go rotten."

U.S. Oil Blueprint Black

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Federal Energy Administration believes the U.S. can never again be free of foreign oil because no good substitutes for oil are anywhere near.

Basically, the FEA has concluded that coal cannot substitute for oil because it is too difficult to mine and burn. It believes that atomic power is only a substitute for coal, not oil. It also believes that synthetic fuels, solar energy and geothermal power provide no near-term relief from the chronic U.S. oil deficit because they are at least 10 years away from making even the smallest impact on energy use.

The lack of an oil substitute, the FEA suggests, means the U.S. must continue to import oil because the nation does not have enough oil of its own to fuel the economy for any length of time.

Even the oil produced by all-out drilling in the Atlantic Ocean, the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Alaska would free the U.S. from imports for only a few years time, the agency said.

These are the overriding conclusions reached by the FEA in a report labelled Blueprint for Project Independence.

Barrie Clark Ducks Rent Ceiling Issue

Special to The Times

B.C.'s rentalsman has refused to recommend a new rent hike ceiling for the province's 300,000 tenants and instead has handed the controversial problem to Attorney-General Alex Macddnald.

In a Vancouver press conference today Barry Clark admitted he has "ducked the question" by making recommendations to Macdonald on the current eight per cent maximum allowable rent increase without actually suggesting a new figure for the ceiling.

Clark told reporters it would be a conflict of interest for him to recommend a rent ceiling and at the same time try to act as an impartial judge and problem-solver in landlord-tenant disputes.

Instead, Clark has recommended that Macdonald set up a separate commission to decide how big a rent hike landlords should be permitted — a recommendation he claimed Macdonald will implement in the legislature session which will open Nov. 1.

Clark said his own information indicated the eight per cent level was "too low" but he refused to say what the level would be.

Clark hinted he opted for the commission scheme after a report by University of B.C. economist Dr. John Cragg indicated a rent ceiling figure far higher than the eight per cent figure.

"I told the attorney-general if I were required to recommend on the rent increase I would have to go with the Cragg report, and he indicated he would go along with my recommendation on a commission," Clark said.

Clark said the Cragg formula, which he earlier called "shocklingly high" took into account skyrocketing costs which the eight per cent freeze failed to account for.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said in Victoria following Clark's announcement he is aware of the problems facing the rentalsman's office and that he will discuss the problems with Cabinet.

He said he wished to assure tenants that if the rentalsman cannot handle rent increase reviews and complaints, somebody will carry on the function.

He agreed that in time the policy end of the rentalsman's responsibilities may move closer to the housing department and the complaint side could operate separately.

"We have no intention of abandoning tenants who need rental review," he said.

The attorney-general said Clark has been doing a "marvellous job" and he has full confidence in him.

Clarke also partially agreed with landlords who have claimed that the eight per cent freeze has created a housing shortage by discouraging people from building rental accommodation.

"I don't think the cessation of home construction was caused by the eight per cent freeze because the situation is the same in Ontario and Quebec where there is no freeze," Clarke said.

"But I do think that if there has been a time in the past 12 months when this cessation would have been turned around, then the eight per cent freeze is in all probability responsible for a failure to start up."

Landlord groups acted quickly, blasting Clarke for "passing the buck" on the controversial question.

Realty Probe Set

A B.C. government inquiry into the real estate industry will be launched next year, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald announced Tuesday.

University of B.C. economist Gideon Rosenbluth, 53, has been assigned the task which will include investigation of the industry's code of ethics, abuse of realtors' licences and a fairness of sales commissions in an escalating market.

Macdonald described the survey as a "leisurely look" into the industry which will take six to eight months. Rosenbluth will act as a special consultant to Macdonald and will not hold formal hearings such as royal commissions usually hold.

Speculation by salesmen will be studied but Macdonald said the inquiry will also look into the possibility of establishing some minimum wage guarantee for sale representatives.

While escalating real estate prices also mean increasing commissions, Macdonald said the lowest 25 per cent of salesmen receive an average monthly salary of only $249.

"That may be okay for part-timers or people who come into and then leave the industry, but it's below minimum wage," he said.

Part of the problem may be too many salesmen, he added.

Salesmen are not the only people involved in speculation, said Macdonald, and he said he wondered whether B.C. should follow Ontario's lead with a tax on land speculation profits.

Rosenbluth's appointment was announced at a meeting of the salesmen's division of Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board and it met with applause from the audience.

The crowd was not so pleased, however, with the suggestion of a minimum pay guarantee for salesmen and one man shouted from the group that salesmen are free-wheeling people who want to remain on commission.

NEWS BRIEFS

New Bomb Letter

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Authorities have received a second letter from an extortionist who claims to have blown up 11 high voltage transmission lines in the Oregon countryside and threatens more explosions unless he is paid $1 million. FBI agents would not elaborate on contents of the letter.

Heroin Haul

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP and customs officers have seized eight pounds of heroin worth at least $4.6 million. The drug was allegedly packaged in a box and mailed here from somewhere in southeast Asia. Yuen Yuk Lam, 53, of nationalist China, was charged with possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Repeating Shots

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A gunman shot seven people in a bar — six of them apparently because the gun would not stop firing.

None of the victims was severely hurt. Police said the man walked into the bar, knocked a man down and shot him. The gunman also fell and the gun kept on firing, hitting six other people. The gunman escaped.

Solomons Quake

HONOLULU (AP) — A major earthquake struck a remote area of the South Pacific, authorities said today. There were no early reports of casualties or damages. The quake, which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale, was recorded in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands.

Knives Found

BOSTON (UPI) — Hundreds of students at two racially troubled Boston schools filed through metal detectors on loan from two airlines Tuesday in attempts to keep weapons out of the schools. Police found eight knives discarded on the school lawns.

Increase in Pay Hinted for MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay increases for MPs may be in the offing, Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp announced in the Commons Tuesday.

Replying to Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who complained that members face soaring living costs like everyone else, Sharp said he hoped to "persuade the government to bring forward some proposals about members' salaries."

Members last received increases in 1971, when pay went to $18,000 from $12,000 a year.

In addition, MPs receive a tax-free expenses allowance of $8,000 to $9,650 a year, depending on constituency.

A salary increase based on inflation would give MPs an increase to at least $23,040 — their present $18,000 plus a 28-per cent raise of $5,040.

One parliamentary official has estimated that the average MP works about 60 hours a week "and you can add an automatic 20 hours to that for ministers." Most organized workers now work between 32 and 38 hours a week with provisions for overtime.

The extra work that goes with a cabinet post is worth more money—a $15,000 salary plus unlimited expenses on top of the basic $18,000. Cabinet ministers also have a $2,000 car allowance.

Oil Firms Profits Soar

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The biggest U.S. oil companies began reporting third-quarter earnings Tuesday, with profits increased to one and a half times over those reported a year ago.

Exxon Corp., the largest, said earnings rose 25.4 per cent over the third quarter of 1973, while Shell Oil's were ahead 158 per cent, Standard Oil of Indiana's earnings doubled and Gulf Oil Corp.'s were up 31 per cent.

In Canada, Imperial Oil Ltd. reported earnings for the first nine months ended Sept. 30 were $252 million or $1.93 a share compared with $154 million or $1.18 a share during the corresponding period in 1973.

The company said in a release the increased earnings were due to higher prices for crude oil, natural gas and petroleum products, and a stronger market and improved prices for chemicals.

Earnings by Gulf and Exxon in the U.S. had risen dramatically in the 1973 period over the 1972 quarter.

Greek Junta to Exile For New Conspiracy

Times News Services

ATHENS — Former dictator George Papadopoulos and four of his closest associates in the ousted military junta were arrested and exiled to a tiny island in the Aegean Sea today for conspiring against Greece's three-month-old civilian regime.

Former military police chief Brig. Dimitrios Ioannides, included among those to be deported, escaped arrest and was being sought by police.

A government announcement said those arrested with Papadopoulos were his former deputy premiers, Stylianos Patakos and Nicholas Makarezos; one of the hard-line ministers in his regime, Ioannis Ladas; and the former chief of the central intelligence agency, Michael Roufogalis.

The government announced Tuesday that Papadopoulos has been under house arrest for the last three weeks "for making conspiratorial moves." There have been persistent reports that leaders of the ousted military regime were plotting to make a comeback.

The jailed men, all former army officers, were the chief conspirators in the colonels' coup in April, 1967, that ended parliamentary democracy in Greece. They ran Greece until a junta of generals overthrew Papadopoulos last November in the wake of violent student demonstrations.

The reform government which replaced the dictatorship in July, announced Monday that Papadopoulos, Roufogalis and three other leading members of the military dictatorship have been charged with responsibility for the "premeditated multiple murder" of at least 18 persons during the student uprising last November.

The maximum penalty on that charge is death.

CONVICTS SHOOT WAY OUT

MONTREAL (UPI) — Five "extremely dangerous" convicts shot their way out of the visitors' room at the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary today and fled in a series of two cars to the downtown area where police staged a massive manhunt.

The driver of the second car, who was taken hostage, was later found unharmed. Police said he had been forced into the trunk of the car when it was abandoned by the prisoners but later managed to free himself.

A police spokesman said the men, three of whom escaped last June from the same maximum security prison, were "considered extremely dangerous.

"These guys shoot to kill," he said. "They've got nothing to lose."

A spokesman for the prison said the five had congregated in the visitors' room, along with another inmate and about 10 visitors, when they were suddenly given a "bag of arms" apparently smuggled in by an unidentified visitor.

The men then ran out, firing several times as they fled, he said.

'Save Highlands' Campaign Gains Momentum

The "Save the Highlands" campaign was turned on full force at a public meeting Tuesday night and picked up support from other community groups and some municipal officials.

Wearing paper flowers proclaiming the campaign slogan, members of the Highlands District Association pleaded with the Capital Region Board to save the "island of serenity" in the midst of Greater Victoria.

The public hearings, called to find out what Greater Victoria residents think of the regional development plan, drew crowds of about 80 in the afternoon and another 150 in the evening. Some 20 briefs were presented during the two sessions.

Objections to the plan were numerous and pleas for amendments to the plan ranged from scrapping the whole thing to moving a warehousing zone out of one small area.

At both afternoon and evening meetings, board chairman Jim Campbell tried to reassure groups and individuals that the regional plan will not be an inflexible, unalterable framework of planning policies.

"I know some people think it's a concrete, stainless steel-blueprint that will be stamped on this area and its residents for all time, but it's not," he told one speaker.

And, dealing specifically with the concerns of Highlands residents, Campbell stressed that the CRD has not arrived at any estimated population totals for residential development in that area.

When one resident pointed out that a newspaper report put the ultimate figure as high as 35,000 people, Campbell shrugged and said: "We're also in the difficult position of having everyone concerned about this using the figure that happens to suit their purposes best."

Highlands Association president Frank Spellacy told the board the Highlands, which under the plan is slated for heavy urban development by the year 2,001, should be preserved as a recreational area for Greater Victoria.

He suggested that the zoning designation of "potential urban" for the Highlands be changed to "upland" which would cut off dense development.

The Highlands cause also received support from Derek Mallard of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment; from Bruce Hardy of the Victoria Sierra Club; from Oak Bay Ald. and regional director John Goult, who said alternatives must be studied; from Saanich Ald. and director Sandy Noel who said costs of servicing the Highlands must be looked at and from Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner who said he was impressed by the presentation.

Campbell said population in the Highlands will depend on detailed studies of sewage, transportation and other related problems.

Such studies would determine the population density which that area could absorb in the long-term, but "we are not able to say what that will be at this stage of the game."

Saanich, represented by Mayor Ed Lum, filed a statement objecting to several proposals in the regional plan, and stressed that the plan itself will not be "acceptable" to that municipality unless its suggested amendments are adopted.

In particular, Lum said, Saanich opposes the concept that each municipality should supplement the regional plan's goals and objectives by preparing its own official community plan.

The Saanich feeling is that this technique will deprive municipalities of some of their present automony, he said, because the community plans once adopted and registered can only be changed with cabinet approval.

The method will also prove "unwieldy" as it will "remove the very flexibility which could be required to respond to emerging crisis situations such as housing, transportation, supply and agricultural production."

Lum said to suggest that the regional plan will not be implemented without such
